Ford Hits 'Trust' Talk

Ann Arbor, Mich. (UPI) — President Ford officially opened his campaign against Jimmy Carter at his alma mater Wednesday, challenging the Democratic candidate head-on with "it is not enough for anyone to say 'trust me' — trust must be earned."

Ford came back to the University of Michigan where he graduated 40 years ago and said he has led the nation to "an incredible comeback" during his two years in the White House.

"The question in this campaign of 1976 is not, 'Who has the better vision of America,' " Ford said. "The question is, 'Who will act to make that vision a reality?' "

Ford's speech at the university where he was a star football center in the 1930s was his first outside Washington since winning the Republican nomination for election in his own right. Carter kicked off his Democratic campaign on Labor Day in Warm Springs, Ga.

There were hecklers in the Michigan audience, but Ford got a one-minute standing ovation when he made his entrance with his First Lady and a burst of applause when he said, "The American people will demand specifics — not smiles; performances — not promises."

Mrs. Ford actually upstaged her husband, getting two standing ovations to his one. The president appeared irritated at times when students shouted objections to what he had to say.

"Trust is not being all things to all people, but being the same thing to all people. Trust is not cleverly shading words so that each separate audience can hear what it wants to hear, but saying plainly and simply what you mean and meaning what you say."

He began by recalling he took office after the "difficult" Vietnam War and during "a painful ordeal, economic adversity and political crisis" caused by the Watergate scandal and Richard M. Nixon's resignation.

"We were betrayed by corruption at the highest levels of government," he said. But "in the last two years, the United States has made an incredible comeback — and we're not through yet."

Ford said, "The American people are ready for the simple truth, simply spoken, about what the government can do for them and what it cannot and should not do."

In policy matters, Ford broke major new ground only in the area of housing.

He said he would recommend changes in the federal housing administration law "to reduce down payments on lower and middle priced housing, by up to 50%."

He also said he would order the Housing and Urban Development Department to speed up a new federal guarantee program to lower monthly payments in early years of ownership and gradually increase them as family income rises.

On other major issues, Ford pledged to continue policies which he said were aimed at creating 2.5 million new jobs each year, holding down inflation, assuring all Americans "accessible and affordable" health care, producing "quality education," and foreign policies to keep the nation out of war.

Ford said he would fight unemployment "with an emphasis on our youth, especially the minorities," to produce "permanent jobs" in the private sector rather than "demeaning, dead-end jobs paid for out of the federal treasury."

Ford, hinting at some new future effort to help young Americans entering the job market, recalled the government has grants, loans and scholarships to help provide a college education.

"I believe we can apply this same principle to create a program for young people who choose not to go to college, but want a job at which they can learn a trade, a craft or practical business skills," he said.

Nebraska Democrats Smell Victory

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Democrats have won only two presidential contests in Nebraska in the last 40 years.

But Jimmy Carter's state coordinator, Jim Humlicek of Lincoln, thinks they may taste one of those rare political treats, their first since 1964, this November.

"I'd say it's a 50-50 proposition. We have to do well in Omaha and Lincoln and carry the farm and ranch vote, but we're in a position to do so," Humlicek said Wednesday.

"I'm very optimistic."

Carter's campaign headquarters in Atlanta is "not entirely sure" it agrees with the 50-50 assessment, Humlicek acknowledges.

But it is providing "reasonable" budgetary support for Nebraska organizational work, he said. Humlicek declined to place a price tag on the campaign effort.

It will feature target canvassing of perhaps 100,000 households in Nebraska, and at least one "literature drop" at the doorstep of every home in Omaha and Lincoln and most households in every community of more than 10,000 persons.

Humlicek guesses that the Carter campaign will ditribute one million pieces of campaign material to Nebraskans before November.

The 30-year-old Lincolnite, on leave from his post as an assistant to Mayor Helen Boosalis, will coordinate the activities of a paid campaign staff of half a dozen people and volunteers operating out of nearly 20 campaign offices, most of them shared with the Democratic Party and other Democratic candidates.

"I think you may see one of the most professional presidential races run in this state in the last couple of decades," Humlicek said.

Voter registration will be largely a party function.

If the party adds 20,000 Democrats to the registration lists by November, they could "make all the difference on election day," Humlicek pointed out.

Those new Democratic voters would probably represent 3% of the total vote in November and decide the contest in a close race, he said.

There has been no final word from Atlanta on whether Carter or his vice presidential running mate, Sen. Walter Mondale, will campaign in Nebraska.

It will largely depend on future developments in the campaign, including private polls of Carter's changing fortunes in other states.

"If the situation in other states begins to change, additional resources might be moved to the plains states where there appears to be an interesting turnaround in political preferences," Humlicek said.

"The plains and mountain states are traditionally considered to be Republican in presidential races, but that is not necessarily true this year. We think Nebraska is consistent with that."

With only five electoral votes, Nebraska must be considered to be no more than "moderately important" to the Carter effort at the moment, he acknowledged.

"But it could take on increased importance if there is a movement to place more emphasis on the Midwest."

Humlicek expects "a high degree of ticket splitting" in Nebraska this year, and rates the chances of Democratic senatorial nominee Edward Zorinsky and 2nd District congressional nominee John Cavanaugh to be good.

That could be significant for Carter, since the two Omahans could give their presidential nominee a boost in Nebraska's most populous city if they score as highly as Humlicek predicts.

"We think we're in a position to aid some candidates, and some of them are in position to help us," he said. "We're all in this together."

Heading the Carter effort will be Nebraska's most popular Democrat, Gov. J. James Exon, and he will hit the road for Carter this fall.

Economic issues, including agriculture, will be important in Nebraska, Humlicek expects.

"I can't help but think that the Ford administration record on agriculture has to help us," he noted.

"Too many people have been hurt by cattle prices, by the ups and downs of the grain market and by the grain embargo."

But above the traditional issues are two "attitudinal" issues which may be especially important to Nebraskans, Humlicek said.

"There is an undirected desire for change . . . and a desire to return to more traditional kinds of values. Carter speaks to these two basic themes."

It all presents Democrats with their best opportunity for a presidential victory in Nebraska in a dozen years.

"We're going to win if we do our work," Humlicek insists.

First Scanning Of Budgets Should Relieve Taxpayers

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

About one-third of the 78 state agencies scrambled Wednesday to meet the 5 p.m. deadline to submit their 1977-78 budget requests.

And John H. Jacobson, state budget administrator, had some good news — tentatively — for taxpayers.

"Folks have probably been as conservative as they've been, as long as I've been in the office," Jacobson said after skimming agencies' general fund (state tax) requests.

Many, he said, seek only a 5% to 7% overall increase, and "several are asking for less in 1977-78 than they have in 1976-77."

He noted his office had directed state agency heads to plug in a 5% increase for salaries and fringe benefits, which typically take $4 of each $5 appropriated. Thus, the dollar-want documents coming in represented overall small sums for fattening. There are notable exceptions.

Gov. J. James Exon and the State Board of Equalization (which recently set record-high tax rates) appealed this summer for bare-bones spending, and some state senators suggested no increases might be warranted in 1977-78. General fund appropriations currently total $433.97 million.

Jacobson said state computer personnel will verify the tax fund requests Thursday, and his budget office will begin analyzing revenue projections to learn if the new tax rates will generate enough for upcoming budget needs.

If a tax surplus is envisioned when Exon gives his budget address to the Legislature in mid-January, Jacobson said the governor would push a tax rate cut, rather than spending the additional dollars that would be raised. But it's too early yet to tell.

What agency needs to apply to the tax bite will become clearer later this week. Jacobson explained that the giant Welfare Department, for example, got a budget deadline extension for a few days until federal fund expectations are firm.

And the Department of Institutions with its sprawling statewide operations, dropped two foreboding boxes of budget documents into Jacobson's office at 5:01 p.m.

The biggest state tax user is the University of Nebraska, which is asking for a 14.18% general fund increase — $108 million (of $252 million all-funds), up from the current $94.6 million. More dollars for ag improvement will be added to the total after Oct. 15.

At the current price of state operations, the NU budget proposal represents fully a fourth.

"This represents the most modest increase requested in state general funds since you and I have been in our respective positions," NU President D. B. Varner wrote Exon.

"This more modest approach was taken in recognition of the relatively generous support provided during the past three years (25%-range increases) and also because of the importance of the impact of the drought on the state's economy."

Varner said the NU budget proposal "calls for modest salary increases, a recognition of the impact of inflation an approximately 2% for program improvement and enrichment."

Of the agency totals officially logged late Wednesday, 29 seek increases and seven want less money than they get now.

Declines were registered by the Legislative Council, District Courts, Public Service Commission, Veterans Affairs, Water Resources, Department of Administrative Services and Investment Council.

Among those after more money are the lieutenant governor, but only a mere $78 increase to $47,125. The governor's office asks for an $11,199 boost to $200,334. Those small increases are typical of numerous agencies, from the small Board of Pardons to the giant Labor Department.

The constitutional offices — for instance, the auditor, secretary of state, treasurer, attorney general — seek relatively few new dollars, despite domination by Republicans in a Democratic administration.

Besides NU, the tab for significant tax fund hikes came from the Education Department (from $74.5 million currently up to $93.6 million), Roads ($794,000 up to $1.2 million), Game and Parks ($4 million up to $4.68 million), Arts Council ($219,396 up to $436,770) and Claims Board ($306,000 up to $524,983).

27th, Pine Lake Shopping Center Endorsed

By LYNN ZERSCHLING

The City-County Planning Commission finally bit the bullet and recommended approval of a new shopping center at 27th and Pine Lake Rd. Wednesday.

However, the planners couldn't reach a decision on how large another center should be at 56th and Old Cheney Rd. and deferred that decision yet another week.

Designation of major shopping centers marks a cornerstone in the formulation of the new Comprehensive Plan and culminates several years' of debates and discussions.

Sites are proposed at 56th and Old Cheney Rd. and at 27th and Pine Lake Rd. in the preliminary land use plan. That land use plan is a major component of the Comprehensive Plan.

Both developer Hub Hall, who proposed the 56th St. site, and developer John F. O'Neill, who drew up the 27th St. proposal, want their shopping centers to encompass about 400,000 square feet of retail space.

The dilemma with Hall's proposal arose after the consultants updating the Comprehensive Plan recommended that the shopping center there be about half that size.

In a report relayed by a planning department staffer, Barton-Aschman Associates of Chicago recommended that the center eventually constructed at 56th St. contain around 200,000 square feet of retail space.

Additionally, Barton-Aschman recommended that each center contain another 150,000 square feet of office space.

Before the shopping center at 56th St. can be built by Hall and the 27th St. center built by O'Neill, the City Council will have to approve special permits authorizing construction.

The issue before the planning commission Wednesday were zoning changes to pave the way for that action.

The planners unanimously approved O'Neill's application for a change of zone from A-1 Single Family to C Multiple Dwelling.

Hall is requesting a change of zone from G Local Business and A-1 Single Family to J-1 Planned Commercial.

Commission members Art Duerschner, Thelma Miller, Bruce Nims and Lou Shackelford voted to approve Hall's application. Members Moneta Mathews, Jim Hacker and Jerome Warner voted against it.

Commissioner George Williams had declared a conflict of interest and did not vote because the engineering firm he works for is retained by one of the applicants. Another member, Robert Allington, was absent. It takes five votes for the commission to forward an application on to the City Council.

Hacker and Mathews said they agreed with Barton-Aschman that the 56th St. center should be smaller.

Hall's attorney, David Pierson, appeared flabbergasted at the commission's action since during the past several years the planners have favored the 56th St. location above all others.

Two years ago the City Council rejected the commission's recommendation and turned down the 56th St. application. Two other applications for regional shopping centers also were rejected by the council at that time. The centers proposed two years ago, however, would have been twice as large as the applications now being considered.

Reacting to the planner's inaction on the 56th St. zoning request, Pierson said, "I'm stunned. I simply don't understand what the commission is doing, even though the commission seems to think it does."

Planning Director Doug Brogden suggested that planning department staffers meet with Pierson and Hall to discuss a compromise solution.

Woman So Fond Of Car It'll Be With Her Forever

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — When Chunky died, Edith Crow just couldn't drive herself to say goodbye to her old friend. Now she won't have to, and Chunky will be at home with her forever.

It sounds like a touching story of friendship between Mrs. Crow and, perhaps, her dog or cat.

But no, Chunky is a car.

Or was a car.

Now it is an 1,800-pound block of metal squeezed into a memorial by a York, Pa., junk dealer.

"I grew so attached to that car," explained Mrs. Crow, a mother of three. "It never let me down. It saw me through thick and thin, ice and snow, the worst weather imaginable. Even today, I carry Chunky's ignition key on my key ring."

Chunky, a 1963 Chevrolet Nova convertible, was driven 200,000 miles before it finally gave out early this summer.

Mrs. Crow had to do some searching before she found a junk dealer willing to compact the car. The block off the old Chunky came back last month to the Crow home in this Philadelphia suburb. The family invited 175 guests to a welcome home party, and one gave Mrs. Crow a gold-plated Chevy hubcap as a memento.

The block sits in the Crow's driveway but Mrs. Crow said she plans to mount it on a pedestal and plant flowers around it.

Chunky was a one-person car, Mrs. Crow said. Her husband, Bob, agreed.

"That car wouldn't do anything for me," he said. "I'd take it out and it'd break down. I'd call Edith. She'd come along and Chunky would kick right over.

"I remember one Christmas Eve we had a snow that was thigh-deep," he recalled. "Bulldozers couldn't get through, but old Chunky moved and got Edith home that night with the trunk and back seat loaded with Christmas presents."

"Bob's jealous," suggested Mrs. Crow. "I think he was always jealous of Chunky."

But Crow, a machine operator, admired the old car and said it had a personality of its own. For example, he said, Chunky would not accept a new speedometer cable. Several were installed, but none worked.

"I've been working around machinery since I was a teen-ager and that was the weirdest hunk of machinery I ever saw," he said.

A WOMAN AND HER CAR . . . she'll put 'Chunky' on pedestal.

Woman So Fond Of Car It'll Be With Her Forever

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — When Chunky died, Edith Crow just couldn't drive herself to say goodbye to her old friend. Now she won't have to, and Chunky will be at home with her forever.

It sounds like a touching story of friendship between Mrs. Crow and, perhaps, her dog or cat.

But no, Chunky is a car.

Or was a car.

Now it is an 1,800-pound block of metal squeezed into a memorial by a York, Pa., junk dealer.

"I grew so attached to that car," explained Mrs. Crow, a mother of three. "It never let me down. It saw me through thick and thin, ice and snow, the worst weather imaginable. Even today, I carry Chunky's ignition key on my key ring."

Chunky, a 1963 Chevrolet Nova convertible, was driven 230,000 miles before it finally gave out early this summer.

Mrs. Crow had to do some searching before she found a junk dealer willing to compact the car. The block off the old Chunky came back last month to the Crow home in this Philadelphia suburb. The family invited 175 guests to a welcome home party, and one gave Mrs. Crow a gold-plated Chevy hubcap as a momento.

The block sits in the Crow's driveway but Mrs. Crow said she plans to mount it on a pedestal and plant flowers around it.

Chunky was a one-person car, Mrs. Crow said. Her husband, Bob, agreed.

"That car wouldn't do anything for me," he said. "I'd take it out and it'd break down. I'd call Edith. She'd come along and Chunky would kick right over.

"I remember one Christmas Eve we had a snow that was thigh-deep," he recalled. "Bulldozers couldn't get through, but old Chunky moved and got Edith home that night with the trunk and back seat loaded with Christmas presents."

"Bob's jealous," suggested Mrs. Crow. "I think he was always jealous of Chunky."

But Crow, a machine operator, admired the old car and said it had a personality of its own. For example, he said, Chunky would not accept a new speedometer cable. Several were installed, but none worked.

"I've been working around machinery since I was a teen-ager and that was the weirdest hunk of machinery I ever saw," he said.

A WOMAN AND HER CAR . . . she'll put 'Chunky' on pedestal.

Speed Limit Enforcement Varies

(C) Chicago Sun-Times

If you did any long-distance driving this summer, you were made aware of — and may even have suffered financial distress because of — wide variations in enforcement of the uniform nationwide highway speed limit.

Variable enforcement policies, never publicly announced or posted, are becoming a major problem, according to John Stahr, program co-ordinator for the U S Transportation Department

States are sworn under federal law to enforce the 55 m.p.h limit consistently or forfeit their federal highway money, which none can afford to do

They also are required to submit speed-monitoring information and other reports to Washington that spell out how the limits are being disregarded

AAA Voices Concern

The American Automobile Association has expressed concern about the increasing nonenforcement of the posted limits. Motorists, especially those from outside a given area, have no way of knowing what the effective limits are.

Policies are established without public knowledge in the offices of the governors' political advisers and in state police squadrooms

The standards may change from one hour to the next and from one stretch of highway to the next, depending on such variables as the militancy of police union organizers and the status of their pay negotiations. In Illinois, for example, state troopers currently are mostly handing out warnings in place of tickets, thus hoping to demonstrate their unhappiness with their paychecks.

Congress adopted the 55 m p h. maximum as a fuel-conservation measure of 1974. Unrealistically, no exceptions were made, even for good-weather driving on straight, level, multilane Interstates designed for speeds over 70 m p h

As a consequence, more vehicles are moving at about the same generally lower speeds. There are not as many fatal accidents. And gasoline consumption is less than it would be otherwise. However, faster speeds undoubtedly contributed to the increase of almost 3% in demand for motor fuel early in the summer. Consumption in August ran 1.2% over the same month a year ago.

Unpopularity Admitted

Gen Benjamin D. Davis (Ret.), the Transportation Department's consultant promoter of the uniform speed limit, has conceded that it is both very unpopular and the subject of widespread doubletalk

On some Interstate highways, a driver who pokes along at 60 or 62 is interfering with the smooth, presumably safe flow of traffic and is in danger of having a tractor-trailer run down his tailpipe. In other states, police radar units will pounce on the same driver.

New Mexico and Virginia were added recently to the AAA's unofficial list of strict-enforcement states, joining Maryland, Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

Although lenient policies would seem more logical in the West and Midwest, with their wide-open spaces, there are contradictions within the regional patterns. Last winter the average highway speed reported by urban Connecticut was about 61 m.p.h., compared with under 55 in Idaho.

Connecticut submitted figures admitting that almost half of its highway traffic moved during the winter at speeds of over 60 m.p.h In New Jersey, only 7% exceeded that average speed.

45,000 Arrested In Kansas

In the first quarter of this year, Connecticut police made 14,000 speeding arrests, compared with 36,000 in New Jersey and, incidentally, 45,000 in rural Kansas.

The average reported speed in Illinois during that period was just over 55, with 18% of the traffic exceeding 60 m.p.h. and only 4% exceeding 65. By contrast, North Dakota acknowledged that 22% of its traffic moved at over 65.

There were about 43,000 speeding arrests in Illinois in the first quarter, as against 62,000 in South Carolina (where the speed trap has long been a big revenue producer) but only 2,700 in laissez-faire North Dakota.

Many local judges are giving only token fines for violations that would not be violations under the old limits, usually 70 m p h. on the Interstate system. Some states have considered lesser penalties or no penalties at all under their driver's-license suspension procedures for speeding violations that are "fuel conservation violations" and not traffic safety violations.

What Can Feds Do?

Slap-on-the-wrist fines and different license revocation procedures would both be evidence of noncompliance with the federal law. But what, realistically, can the federal agency do about them, or about the official admissions of speed flows far above the legal limit?

Left in the lurch is poor Maxie Motorist. As he crosses a state boundary, the signs all warn: 55 m.p.h. limit strictly enforced. He has no way of assessing the governor's political security, the influence of the trucking lobby, the progress of state police wage bargaining, or the other factors that determine the actual policy.

One of these days a constitutional lawyer who gets stopped in Maryland or Idaho will take the case to the Supreme Court and test whether the unknowing driver has been deprived of due process of law.

Richard Speck UPI

Speck Denied Parole

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — It took only five minutes on Wednesday for the state parole board to deny freedom to Richard Speck, convicted of killing eight young nurses in their Chicago townhouse 10 years ago and now serving 400 to 1,200 years in the state penitentiary.

Law enforcement officials and relatives of the slain women appeared at a public hearing on paroling Speck.

"I would rather come to his execution than his pardon," said John Wilkening of Lansing, Ill. His only daughter, Pamela, was one of Speck's victims.

It became known several weeks ago that Speck was eligible for parole. Since that time, officials said, they received about 3,000 letters demanding Speck be kept behind bars.

The Illinois Parole and Pardon Board deliberated for only five minutes before denying Speck parole.

California Putting Into Effect 'Lifeline' Utility Rate Approach

©The New York Times

San Francisco — California has just begun to put into effect a controversial new approach to utility rate-setting called "Lifeline" intended to conserve energy and give residential consumers some limited protection from inflation.

As California's Public Utilities Commission began applying it in a rate increase that took effect this month in northern California, the lifeline idea has these major elements:

—Prices of basic or lifeline quantitites of natural gas and electricity for residential use are temporarily frozen.

—The utility, Pacific Gas and Electric Co., was authorized to cover rising costs by raising rates on household consumption above the lifeline quantities and on governmental, commercial and industrial consumers.

—In protecting basic consumption, the commission took a small step toward so-called rate inversion. That is, as energy consumption rises, the cost to the consumer will also rise. That reverses the traditional pattern of "promotional" or declining rates as use increases. More steps toward inversion are in the future, according to Water J. Cavagnaro, the agency's conservation chief.

Other States Watching

California's interpretation of "Lifeline" will be closely watched by other states, including New York, that are considering utility rate reform. Other states will also be watching other planned California experiments with energy conservation, including higher authorized profit rates for utilities that push conservation, incentives for installation of insulation, solar heating, day-night thermostats and devices to restrict hot-water flow through taps and showerheads.

The Democratic-controlled California Legislature expressed the lifeline idea in its 1975 act as follows: "Light and heat are basic human rights, and must be made available to all the people at low cost for basic minumum quantities."

Resolving a means-test issue that has divided proponents, the Public Utilities Commission said "all the people" meant just that, "regardless of age, family status, financial condition or income."

The Legislature decided that rates for lifeline quantities of gas and electricity could not be raised above Jan. 1, 1976, levels until all other rates had risen an average of 25%, whenever that occurred. After that, the law imposes no limitation on increases in lifeline rates.

Factors Determine Effects

How lifeline rates will affect a family's monthly energy bills will depend on two factors: how much energy above lifeline volumes the family uses and the rates allowed by the commission for such additional use. Northern California consumers who use no more than lifeline quantities unquestionably have a new, if temporary, degree of protection from inflation.

Conservationist groups sponsoring lifeline, such as TURN — Towards Utility Rate Normalization of California — are expected to press for more effective protection for increases in lifeline quantities as set down by the utilities commission and for further shifts of cost increases from residential to business consumers.

Two Republican members of the California commission have criticized "Lifeline" as inevitably leading to higher costs and prices for California goods and services, loss of sales and production, "more closed businesses" and more unemployment.

Commissioners William Symons Jr. and Vernon L. Sturgeon, in a reluctant concurrence to the July 13, 1976, decision defining lifeline quantities, warned that the Legislature had "imposed a scheme for massive subsidies to one class of utility users — not to be borne by government — but to be financed by raising the bills paid by other utility customers."

Bazooka Bye-Bye Backfires

Cincinnati (AP) — Citizens of nearby Delhi Township recently drove a band of pesky blackbirds from their woods by nightly use of "bazooka gas guns," propane-propelled automatic exploding devices.

But soon afterward, township officials got a call from neighboring Green Township, asking how they could get rid of a flock of the annoying birds that had recently settled there.

"The idea was to disperse the birds," said Cliff Stuart, roads superintendent, "but I am afraid we may have sent them to Green Township."

Newsprint Price Increase Noted

Montreal (AP) — Canadian International Paper Co. said its International Paper Sales Co. will increase prices for newsprint sold in the United States and Canada by $20 a ton Dec. 1. Both companies are subsidiaries of International Paper Co. of New York.

The increase matches that announced earlier by Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd. and Abitibi Paper Co. However, Consolidated-Bathurst's increase is effective Nov. 1.

The latest increase brings Canadian International Paper's Canadian price for 30-pound newsprint to $289 a ton and in the United States to $305 a ton.

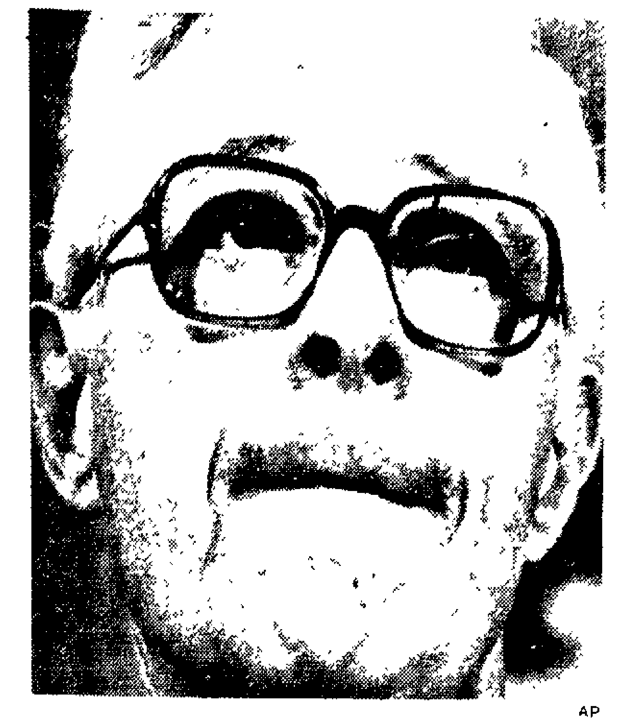
Schorr Refuses To Tell Where He Got Report



AP

SCHORR . . . tight-lipped before-committee.

Washington (UPI) — Citing the First Amendment and his own professional standards, CBS reporter Daniel Schorr refused under oath Wednesday to tell House investigators where he obtained the classified intelligence report he leaked to the press.

Testifying before the House Ethics Committee, and warned repeatedly he might be prosecuted for refusal to cooperate, Schorr said if he disclosed the source of the report "the ultimate losers would be the American people and their free institutions.

"But, beyond all that, to betray a source would be to betray myself, my career, and my life. It is not as simple as saying that I refuse to do it. I cannot do it."

Schorr, perspiring under television lights in the jammed hearing room, cited the First Amendment guarantee of press freedom in refusing to surrender his notes or the copy of the House Intelligence Committee report he supplied to the Village Voice in New York for publication last February.

"This also means, obviously," he said, "that I shall not respond to direct questioning about confidential sources In some 40 years of practicing journalism, I have never yielded to a demand for the disclosure of a source that I have promised to protect and I cannot do so now."

Committee Chairman John Flynt, D-Ga., told Schorr again and again that he might be subject to contempt action for refusing to disclose his source or to answer questions about the July 29 testimony of Rep. James V. Stanton, D-Ohio, who said Schorr told him the report was obtained from the CIA.

Flynt unexpectedly brought the hearing to a close by thanking Schorr for his appearance, notifying him he was still under subpoena, and saying transcripts and the record would have to be studied and another session held, possibly Thursday, before any decision could be taken.

He refused to speculate whether he would press for a contempt citation against Schorr

The 60-year-old reporter declined answering questions nine times, the last refusal to a query from Rep Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., whether Schorr had told his wife or lawyer if he got the report from the CIA

Schorr, who previously testified only his wife and counsel knew who leaked the document, said he could not answer Bennett's question on grounds of First Amendment protection and the lawyer-client-wife relationship

The committee also heard sworn testimony from Village Voice publisher Clay S. Felker, Aaron Latham, who wrote the newspaper's introduction to the report, and Shelly Zalaznick, who edited it

Felker, supporting Schorr's refusal to tell where he got the report, said "we would do the same today if we knew the source" But he said "we made no effort to learn the source We do not know the source"

Latham also was warned of possible contempt action after he told the committee under persistent questioning "We said we didn't know who supplied the report. Any other questions on who is responsible I decline to answer on grounds of the First Amendment."

The committee has been investigating the leak for the past seven months. After the furor arose, CBS excused Schorr from broadcast duties while keeping him on the payroll

Senate Votes To Subsidize Moving Hay In Dry Areas

Washington (AP) — The Senate on Wednesday passed a bill that would help underwrite the cost of transporting hay into drought-stricken areas of the Midwest.

The legislation, approved unanimously, would empower the agriculture secretary to pay farmers in non-drought states 80% of the cost to transport their hay — or up to $50 per ton — into the hay-short, parched areas of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and the Dakotas.

House action was expected later in the week.

The hay program is part of an agricultural marketing bill forged by a House-Senate conference committee from differing versions passed earlier by each chamber.

The legislation also would provide states with up to $1.5 million a year over the next three years to find ways to help farmers better market their commodities to consumers directly — such as through roadside fruit and vegetable stands.

Carter: Ford Fails To Support Farmer

Lake Crystal, Minn. (UPI) — Jimmy Carter Thursday carried his charges the Ford administration has failed to support the family farmer to a Dakota farm and a Minnesota agricultural show.

He repeatedly accused the government of failing to respond to the worst drought in the Upper Midwest since the 1930s.

Carter was reunited with his running mate, Sen. Walter Mondale, who has been off on another campaign trail, and the state's junior senator, Hubert Humphrey, at the Farmfest at Lake Crystal.

The Democratic team followed Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz to the farm show where Carter charged the Agriculture Department has done "virtually nothing" to help drought-stricken farmers.

Ironically, heavy rains had turned the Farmfest area into a meadow of mud and Carter spoke under leaden skies which momentarily threatened his estimated 50,000 listeners with new downpours

In the second day of a swing across the Midwest, the Democratic presidential nominee repeatedly accused Butz of being a pawn of "grain speculators and food processors."

Carter said the administration showed "a tragic lack of leadership by failing to respond to the worst drought ever to strike Minnesota."

Carter said the Agriculture Department had announced no new crop insurance policies would be issued to any farmers in stricken counties and that bureaucratic restrictions made most farmers ineligible for the emergency livestock program

"We have seen under this administration practically no support for the family farmer," Carter said earlier as he stood on a flat rock on a drought-hit 675-acre family farm near Sioux Falls, S.D

"The corporate farmers have benefited," Carter, a peanut farmer and warehouseman himself, said He charged tax laws permit wealthy persons to buy up farms, run them at a loss, "and close down the function of the family farm"

Carter visited the South Dakota farm of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Sieberding and their six children. Their 250 acres of corn will yield only 30 bushels per acre this year.

He walked along the pens and pasture where Sieberding feeds 50 beef cattle and about 500 pigs each year. Then he hopped on a tractor pulling an ensilage cutter, took a shriveled six-inch ear of corn, broke it, and popped some kernels into his mouth.

Parts of the Dakotas are in their worst drought since the 1930s.

Carter also stated his farm policy: price support levels equal to production costs, maximum sales overseas, and a trimming back of the quota on foreign imports from 9% to 7% of total beef consumption

From Minnesota, Carter flew to Michigan where, in Dearborn, he charged that eight years of Repuclian administration have given the American people "the worst economic record since the Great Depression" of the 1930s.

"We have had economic problems before," Carter said in remarks prepared for the Michigan AFL-CIO. "We have had poor leadership before, but never before have we had such widespread lack of trust in our government."

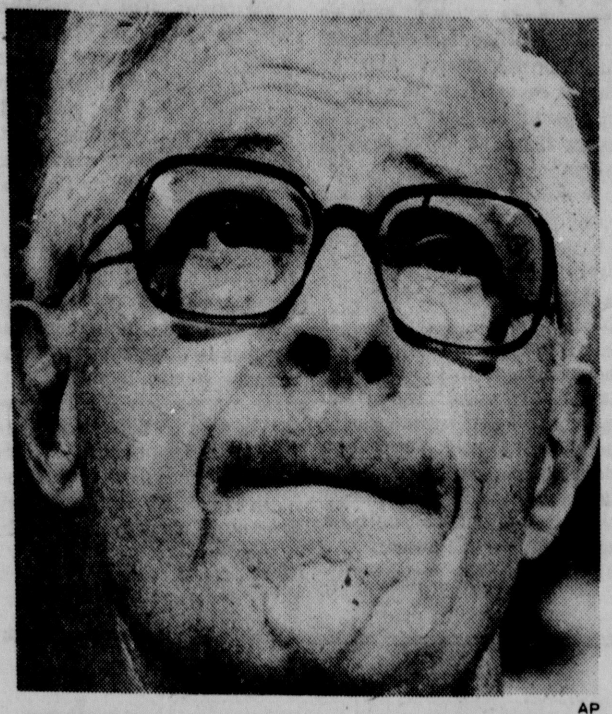
Schorr Refuses To Tell Where He Got Report



AP

SCHORR . . . tight-lipped before-committee.

Washington (UPI) — Citing the First Amendment and his own professional standards, CBS reporter Daniel Schorr refused under oath Wednesday to tell House investigators where he obtained the classified intelligence report he leaked to the press.

Testifying before the House Ethics Committee, and warned repeatedly he might be prosecuted for refusal to cooperate, Schorr said if he disclosed the source of the report "the ultimate losers would be the American people and their free institutions.

"But, beyond all that, to betray a source would be to betray myself, my career, and my life. It is not as simple as saying that I refuse to do it. I cannot do it."

Schorr, perspiring under television lights in the jammed hearing room, cited the First Amendment guarantee of press freedom in refusing to surrender his notes or the copy of the House Intelligence Committee report he supplied to the Village Voice in New York for publication last February.

"This also means, obviously," he said, "that I shall not respond to direct questioning about confidential sources. In some 40 years of practicing journalism, I have never yielded to a demand for the disclosure of a source that I have promised to protect and I cannot do so now."

Committee Chairman John Flynt, D-Ga., told Schorr again and again that he might be subject to contempt action for refusing to disclose his source or to answer questions about the July 29 testimony of Rep. James V. Stanton, D-Ohio, who said Schorr told him the report was obtained from the CIA.

Flynt unexpectedly brought the hearing to a close by thanking Schorr for his appearance, notifying him he was still under subpoena, and saying transcripts and the record would have to be studied and another session held, possibly Thursday, before any decision could be taken.

He refused to speculate whether he would press for a contempt citation against Schorr.

The 60-year-old reporter declined answering questions nine times, the last refusal to a query from Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., whether Schorr had told his wife or lawyer if he got the report from the CIA.

Schorr, who previously testified only his wife and counsel knew who leaked the document, said he could not answer Bennett's question on grounds of First Amendment protection and the lawyer-client-wife relationship.

The committee also heard sworn testimony from Village Voice publisher Clay S. Felker, Aaron Latham, who wrote the newspaper's introduction to the report, and Shelly Zalaznick, who edited it.

Felker, supporting Schorr's refusal to tell where he got the report, said "we would do the same today if we knew the source." But he said "we made no effort to learn the source. We do not know the source."

Latham also was warned of possible contempt action after he told the committee under persistent questioning: "We said we didn't know who supplied the report. Any other questions on who is responsible I decline to answer on grounds of the First Amendment."

The committee has been investigating the leak for the past seven months. After the furor arose, CBS excused Schorr from broadcast duties while keeping him on the payroll.

It Would Never Play

By JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON — The Wall Street Journal has come up with a revolutionary idea, which is so sensible, but also so subversive, that it will either save or destroy democracy and what we call the free press of America.

The idea, simply stated or overstated, is that if you don't understand what politicians are doing, you should confess your utter confusion and pass by in sorrow and silence. In short: "When in doubt, shut up." Obviously, such unaccustomed modesty, if generally accepted, could ultimately achieve what all newspaper readers have from time to time fervently desired: the abolition of all editorial pages, columnists and other public nuisances.

The Journal reached this remarkable conclusion after trying to decide what it thought about the latest "tax reform" bill approved by the Ways and Means Committee of the House and the Finance Committee of the Senate

"The reason we have delayed in commenting on the compromise legislation," said the Journal, ". . . was the vain hope that with a little time we could make some sense out of the legislation.

"But even after enlisting the aid of a number of eminent private economists and financiers, who spent the weekend slogging through some 1,500 pages, the WSJ is forced to announce its despair. And we have serious doubts that all the economists of Cambridge and Chicago, using all the computers at MIT, could tell us whether this bill would marginally improve or damage the U.S. economy."

The Journal's suggestion is that the President should veto the bill in the hope that the voters in their wisdom next November will elect a new Congress that will pass a simple, one-page tax reform bill within a couple of days in January. Tell it not to Vermont Connecticut Royster!

There is, of course, much to be said for journalistic as for judicial restraint. It would save the readers much silly comment, like the present. Also, it would save the papers a lot of expensive ink and newsprint, but there are some awkward difficulties.

If we waited for clarity in public officials and in ourselves, who would ever speak? Who, on this principle, could comment on Ford's flip-flops on abortion, energy, day-care centers, the Panama Canal, national parks, common-sites picketing, inflation, unemployment, and WIN buttons?

Or Jimmy Carter's mystifying clarifications on grain embargoes, right-to-work laws, "ethnic purity," Clarence Kelley, spending, saving and other inconsistencies and contradictions?

What would we say about the Catholic bishops who want a constitutional amendment forbidding abortion? Or their pressure on Carter to support them in fear of losing the mythical Catholic vote? The bishops are speaking out of sincere religious conviction, which must be respected, but there is no more chance of getting two-thirds of the Congress and three-fourths of the states to outlaw abortion than there is to get a constitutional amendment to outlaw sin. Here, doubt between clashing principles and between the rights and separation of church and state would compel silence.

As to the Journal's remedy of leaving the decision to the voters, this seems to be the popular cry these days. Everybody loves the voters, but most of them are out to lunch. Even before the start of the pro football season, according to the all-knowing Mr. Gallup, "Our national voting participation may be even poorer this year than in 1972, which was the lowest since 1948."

Even so, my brothers on the Journal, while writing in jest, are raising a question readers of newspapers have asked ever since the invention of movable type and before. Is it not absurd that anyone should think he knows enough to write so much and pontificate so much about so many things he knows so little about?

Walter Lippmann gave the classic answer to this in the Atlantic Monthly way back in 1960:

"And you, my dear fellow," I tell the critic, "you be careful. If you go on, you will be showing how ridiculous it is that we live in a republic under a democratic system and that anyone should be allowed to vote. You will be denouncing the principle of democracy itself, which asserts that the outsiders shall be sovereign over the insiders . . .

"Do you not realize that, about most of the affairs of the world, we are all outsiders and ignoramuses, even the insiders who are at the seat of government . . . If the country is to be governed with the consent of the governed, then the governed must arrive at opinions about what their governors want them to consent to. How do they do this?

"They do it by hearing on the radio and reading in the newspapers what the corps of correspondents tell them is going on . . . Here we perform an essential service. In this we do what every sovereign citizen is supposed to do but has not the time or the interest to do for himself. This is our job. It is no mean calling. We have a right to be proud of it and be glad that it is our work."

End To Outrageous Campaign

Critics argue that the U.S. Senate primary campaign in New York which ended Tuesday was a bizarre, all style and no substance battle between the two leading Democratic contenders, Daniel Patrick Moynihan, who won, and Bella Abwug, who lost.

The political atmosphere in New York over the past weeks was charged with some hyperbole and nonsense. Ms. Abzug was strident, as usual, and beside the point in trying to make a big deal out of Moynihan's service with three presidential administrations, two of them Republican. Moynihan, who caught a banana cream pie in the face at one point, was less than accurate in his description of Abzug's voting record.

That most voters love a good show, the substance of it mattering less than the trappings, was illustrated once again by Moynihan's and Abzug's 1-2 finish (or maybe 2-1, depending on the recount).

But we are not completely unhappy with the outcome of the Senate race.

Moynihan is an outrageous character and so is Abzug. Both are smart, however, and could be effective senators. Abzug proved to be fairly effective in the House, which she will soon leave.

But Moynihan, in challenging the solid, respected conservative Republican James Buckley, brings to the general election campaign a reputation for having an understanding of domestic problems mixed with decency and common sense and a nature which does not quiver and knuckle under to the moral hypocrisy exhibited by many of this nation's detractors.

The two characteristics are a good mix, a mix needed on the national scene. It will aid Moynihan in his bid to unseat Buckley.

Driveways And Common Sense

It's easy to sympathize with Henry Keldsen, the retired Lincoln painter whose cement driveway was torn up by the city.

Keldsen apparently recognized that the driveway — which didn't lead back to his property but extended only for 27 feet across city right-of-way from curb to sidewalk — was illegal. But after the city declared his driveway in violation of the ordinance and removed it, he was prompted to ask, "why do these ordinances have to overrule common sense, for gosh sakes?"

He has a point. Keldsen has a narrow lot and much of his front yard is in a city right-of-way which is especially wide on that particular street, so he really doesn't have room for a legal driveway. Yet should he be denied off-street parking space in front of his home?

The city said yes, he should be denied the driveway. But it was not an out-of-the-blue enforcement of some obscure ordinance which came crashing down on a hapless retiree.

City policy has long declared that there be no parking in the public right-of-way for safety and esthetic reasons.

That policy has not always been rigidly enforced, but in recent years nearly 180 illegal driveways have been closed up. This is normally done only when the city is resurfacing a street and putting in curbs and gutters. And when an illegal driveway is removed, the city helps the resident find other access to parking off the street. In Keldsen's case, the city removed a tree and supplied crushed rock for a space Keldsen can reach through an alley at the back of his property.

This is not really an example of bureaucratic heartlessness. We don't think there was wild celebration at City Hall when Keldsen's driveway was removed. Champagne was not uncorked, we'll bet.

It was a matter, rather, of enforcing policy established by city ordinance; a policy to discourage parking on the public right-of-way and a policy which can be changed if the people want it changed.

As an isolated example, perhaps the removal of Keldsen's driveway did not make sense — to him or people who can imagine themselves in his place.

But considering the bigger picture, it did make sense.

By LLOYD W. HERBENER
Executive Director
Nebraska Republican Party
Lincoln, Nebr.

What a misleading and presumptuous Star editorial — September 10 — "Red Paint Ploy Won't Work!"

It seems to me that all of the facts about what John Y. McCollister said while in Lincoln and the Omaha mayor's platform ought to be more closely examined.

Mayor Zorinsky has said he is proud to be a Democrat, the reason he switched from the Republican to the Democratic Party, other than that he couldn't beat John McCollister in a Republican primary, was that he felt closer to the Democratic Party's views and what it stands for

What the Democratic Party stands for at the federal level (the mayor is running for a federal office) is seen in their platform. That platform calls for more government, more control, more government spending everywhere except, of course, more for national defense. In short, the same old bankrupt liberal program that we have seen from the Democrats for 44 years.

The mayor of Omaha has been endorsed by the AFL-CIO (that "great conservative", George Meany's group) He has also been financially supported by them as well

Mr Zorinsky accepted a $2,000 contribution from the International Seafarer's Union — a maritime union that fully supported George Meany and the Longshoremen's refusal to load our grain last year In fact, the president of the International Seafarers, Paul Hall, went to the White House with George Meany and Longshoremen's president Thomas W Gleason to inform the President of his union's support of the grain embargo and the Longshoremen's boycott This is certainly a strange way to show support for Nebraska's agricultural interests

On the 26th of this month, Mayor Zorinsky has that "great conservative," Senator Hubert Humphrey, coming to Omaha to endorse his candidacy and raise money for him. Senator Humphrey will be speaking at a dinner in Omaha in the Civic Auditorium. It just so happens that Senator Humphrey is the architect and co-sponsor of the Humphrey-Hawkins Bill — the blueprint for a complete government-managed economy, and the ultimate height of all congressional bills sponsoring public service jobs (more government make-work), and that is a blueprint for national socialism by any definition!

The Americans for Democratic Action (ADA) has rated vice presidential candidate Walter Mondale as one of the most liberal senators in the U.S. Senate. Whom has the Omaha mayor asked to come to Nebraska and campaign for him? Walter Mondale! There are a number of articulate conservative Democrats in the U.S. Congress whom Mr Zorinsky could have asked to come to Nebraska and speak to what is a basically conservative constituency on his behalf Why the liberals?

Given these facts, which The Star certainly knew or could have obtained, a legitimate question is to whom will the Mayor owe his allegiance if he is elected? Well, who's supporting him . . . George Meany, Hubert Humphrey, Walter Mondale, maritime labor unions, and Jimmy Carter! Are they representative of the mass of Democrats of Nebraska who are being asked to vote for the mayor? I seriously doubt that

John McCollister is just calling it the way he sees it — the way many people see it. I have a feeling as the campaign progresses, differences between McCollister and Zorinsky and the Republican and Democratic Parties will become very clear. Then we will know if Mayor Zorinsky is a conservative or a liberal or a liberal-conservative or a Republican-Democrat. We know what John Y. McCollister is — an out-front conservative Republican!

We're sorry the mayor decided to switch rather than fight He might be, too

Rain on the roof! What a startling awakening we had this morning when we heard the delightful sound of drip, drip, splash, splash. It was gentle and slow in falling, not a mere shower.

The morning-glories outside my kitchen window have all folded their velvety blue skirts and bowed their heads as if in a grateful prayer of thanks.

The trees stand mute while the rain cleanses the leaves and polishes them into a brighter green. The shrubs and thickets' appear brighter, too, after the gray layer of dust has been washed from them. It is a refreshing morning with cooler temperatures.

I remember startling awakenings my sister and I had a number of mornings. We slept upstairs in a big white house when we were little girls. Very early of summer mornings, a woodpecker would sit atop the ridge row of the house and rat-a-tat-tat on the tin. It woke us with a start for the noise seemed to vibrate throughout the entire house.

The woodpecker never seemed to stay long, just long enough to awaken us then fly to the big cottonwood trees nearby. The pair returned year after year to rear their young in the trees so our summer mornings were filled with a steady drumming on the housetop.

I thought of the woodpecker alarm this morning when I awakened and must say I was every bit as startled to hear the rain.

The Farmer disked the ground yesterday in preparation for sowing wheat. As he disked, the dirt blew in such clouds he could scarcely see the marks the disk left.

"I hope it rains before I sow the wheat or I will never see the drill marks in the field for the dust," he said last night.

I believed him for he looked like a coal miner just returned to the surface after a hard day in the mine. His clothes were dusty. In fact when he alighted from the tractor and brushed his overalls to shake some of the dust from his clothes, he set up a minor dust storm.

Somewhere in the whirling dust cloud is a man, I thought, though I don't know how he can see nor breathe.

Now that has all changed with the rain . . . at least for the time being. We will need more, much more to bring the level of moisture up to normal in the soil. But at least the cycle of heat has been broken.

Grapes in various stages of preparation have occupied my time the last few days. Lovely grapes of many varieties grown in our area were given to me for the picking. The dry, torrid days were taking their toll of the fruit.

Yesterday I cooked a portion of them for jam. The day before I canned the juice for making into jelly this winter when I have more time. Today I will cook the remaining grapes for a small glass of jelly and pudding to be devoured immediately, although we have eaten many fresh from the stem.

The aroma of cooking grapes and dripping fruit has filled the house with a delightful scent . . . almost like being in the grape arbor itself.

If it were not so time-consuming, I would make a grape pie. I ate this kind of pie once and thought its flavor was delicious. I have never made one myself because taking the seeds from the grapes requires so much time.

In our area the fruit has fallen from the trees. No doubt it is due to the extreme heat and drought. A man who has raised many varieties of fruit the past years has apples dropping to the ground long before they are ripe, despite his care and attention. He sprayed them five times this season and has kept them well watered.

But now the rain! It has a way of reviving the spirits and one can say, "Maybe next year will be better."

Three Generations Of Giants — Gone

NEW YORK — With the death of Mao Tse-tung, the age of giants is closed at last. To mourn it would take a heart of stone, for it has been a barbarian's passage through oceans of blood and the charnel it washed on the shore makes Attila seem in retrospect as fetching as Peck's Bad Boy.

The giants who led it, or perhaps only made the trip first-cabin, were flamboyant egocentrics whose passion for power fulfilled their age's hunger for new societies organized on the principle of industrial efficiency. This carried most of them toward centralized government constructed around political godheads with mythic or divine characteristics being attributed to the leader, whether he was called Der Fuhrer, Il Duce, the Generalissimo, the Chairman, El Caudillo or the President.

The characteristic political creation of the age of giants was dictatorship, and the characteristic political philosophy, which still survives it in such vestigial artifacts as the CIA and KGB, was that the end justifies the means. Not surprisingly, the citizenry for whom the giants labored became an inhuman abstraction — the masses or the people. Persons who made a to-do about their individuality became nuisances, eccentrics or menaces. The attitude varied from giant to giant, but on balance it was not a good time to be at odds with the will of the people, to be a person. The age gave us no persons' republics.

An exception should be made for Winston Churchill, the one giant of the age who was, in fact, not of the age at all, but a creature of Edwardian England who was still able to sentimentalize war and visualize a future in which the masses would not insist on pressing their power too rudely. Britain rejected him as an antique as soon as the Nazis surrendered.

Time magazine once hailed Churchill as the man of the century. The accolade now seems as amusing as calling World War I the war to end wars. In the age of giants, Churchill was not even a very big giant.

From Lenin, who opened the age in 1917, to Mao, whose death closes it three generations later, there were giant giants, middle-sized giants, mini-giants, midget giants and false giants. The classic specimen of the last category was Chiang Kai-shek, who was inflated so alarmingly by Roosevelt and Churchill that it took Americans a generation to perceive that the castle housed only a mouse.

Francisco Franco was, to a degree, the similar creation of Hitler and Mussolini. De Gaulle sought the gift of inflation from Roosevelt and Churchill, was rejected, went away angry and came back years later to earn the seven-league boots for himself by restoring a France at the edge of breakdown.

Hitler and Stalin, the purest specimens of the age's giant breed, were almost certainly political geniuses, which leaves little more to be said about politics in the 20th Century. Lunacy harnessed to industrialism in the cause of mass uplift. Dreams of perfecting humanity with the bullet in the back of the head and the gas oven. Nasty stuff, but infectious to sanity. Twenty years later Americans were destroying Vietnam to save it.

The age of giants, of course, has actually been over for a long time now, and we are slipping into the age of caretakers. The giants were great biographies and good copy, the caretakers are mostly a yawn. Witness Ford and Carter trying to persuade us that they are up to something vital. Witness Brezhnev the committee chairman in Moscow. Name quickly the prime ministers of Italy, Britain, Japan and Israel. Who is the president of France?

There is scarcely a biography in the bunch. Carter and Ford between them are hardly interesting enough to sustain a magazine article. And isn't it splendid? With no giants strutting around shaking the earth, something vaguely resembling peace has become palpable. Vietnam may have been the last gasp of the age of giants in America.

A case can be argued that it was Kennedy's, Johnson's and Nixon's insistence on trying to preserve gianthood in the presidency that accounted for the Asian fiasco, that they were men reluctant to accept the death of the age of giants, or too slow to perceive that it was over and that giants were no longer possible.

There is a glimpse of sunshine in this conjecture. If the giants, from Lenin to Mao, were not really giants but only expressions of an historic global impulse toward cataclysmic change, then it may be that the rise of the caretakers reflects the arrival of a new epoch in which we want consolidation and stability and, yes, societies that will give us the opportunity to use such gains as the bloodletting netted us to search for our lost individualism.

MARQUIS CHILDS

From A Fast Sitting Position

WASHINGTON — Running for president from the White House, as Gerald Ford is doing, has certain distinct advantages. In the first place, it is much easier on the feet and on the digestive system than barnstorming across the country.

Even though you have never been elected to the office, you stand before that great facade that every American knows is the shrine of authority.

The President in office catches it both ways. When he was campaigning around the country in an effort to outpace Ronald Reagan, he was criticized for neglecting the job. But now that he has apparently decided that the surest way to get another four years is to identify with the highest office in the land, he is charged by the opposition with hiding within the White House.

There are practical advantages that the incumbent president has and the edge of incumbency could elect Ford in a close election — the edge being the goodies he has to hand out to deserving Republicans

Currently 10 vacancies on regulatory agencies are to be filled These are posts with a tenure of six or seven years and they pay salaries of $40,000 a year or more Here are openings to reward faithful party members and thereby enlarge the circle of the President's influence

Among the regulatory agencies with vacancies still to be filled are the Federal Power Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Nuclear Regulatory Agency and the Federal Trade Commission.

Even if the President is defeated, by filling these agencies with conservatives whose views match his, the influence thereby established can extend far into the future in areas vital to the American economy. It was the line followed by President Richard Nixon who left a heritage of rightists in vital agencies.

Even if merely in a negative way, by holding up decisions the power of the regulatory agencies is great and anyone who believes that the selections are objective in terms of knowledge and background need only look at the record of past years.

Congress is holding up many of the President's nominations in the belief that if Jimmy Carter wins on Nov. 2 other — and presumably Democratic names — will be sent up to the Hill.

Through Democratic and Republican administrations, the power of government over wide areas of business operation has been a fact of life regardless of political ideologies. Nowhere has this been more evident than in aviation.

The Civil Aeronautics Board recently overruled the findings of its own law judges to award a trans-Atlantic route to Delta Airlines from Houston, Fort Worth and Atlanta. At the same time, instead of renewing Pan American's rights for Scandinavia, the CAB substituted Northwest, which has never had a trans-Atlantic run.

These decisions come in the face of Pan Am's efforts over 30 years to obtain rights to fly to cities within the continental United States. This comes, too, in the midst of Pan Am's continuing struggle to survive serious losses. More than 12,000 employes have been dismissed in the course of that struggle

The President must now approve or disapprove the CAB's findings. If he rejects the Board's 3 to 1 decision for Delta and Northwest, he will gain the ill will of those carriers.

The action of the CAB comes, too, in the face of a demand by the British for a new Anglo-American agreement to reduce the number of flights between the two nations, giving British Airways about half of the surviving total instead of the 34% which the British state-owned company now has. Inherent in the demand is a threat that if agreement is not reached by next June 1 the British will feel free to unilaterally break with present arrangements.

For 30 years Pan Am, which pioneered many of the world routes and continued to fly them even at a loss, has been refused entry into the United States, with the exception, of course, of the coastal ports.

The administration chose this moment to issue a highly generalized statement on international air policy directly bearing on the present controversy: "All U.S. international carriers should be permitted to have domestic traffic systems to feed traffic to their international operations." If this means anything, it means Pan Am.

Running from the White House has disadvantages, too By a kind of rule of thumb, for every one man appointed to a post by the President, 10 office-seekers are estranged But that is a small price to pay for the trappings of power.

It Would Never Play

By JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON — The Wall Street Journal has come up with a revolutionary idea, which is so sensible, but also so subversive, that it will either save or destroy democracy and what we call the free press of America.

The idea, simply stated or overstated, is that if you don't understand what politicians are doing, you should confess your utter confusion and pass by in sorrow and silence. In short: "When in doubt, shut up." Obviously, such unaccustomed modesty, if generally accepted, could ultimately achieve what all newspaper readers have from time to time fervently desired: the abolition of all editorial pages, columnists and other public nuisances.

The Journal reached this remarkable conclusion after trying to decide what it thought about the latest "tax reform" bill approved by the Ways and Means Committee of the House and the Finance Committee of the Senate.

"The reason we have delayed in commenting on the compromise legislation," said the Journal, ". . . was the vain hope that with a little time we could make some sense out of the legislation.

"But even after enlisting the aid of a number of eminent private economists and financiers, who spent the weekend slogging through some 1,500 pages, the WSJ is forced to announce its despair. And we have serious doubts that all the economists of Cambridge and Chicago, using all the computers at MIT, could tell us whether this bill would marginally improve or damage the U.S. economy."

The Journal's suggestion is that the President should veto the bill in the hope that the voters in their wisdom next November will elect a new Congress that will pass a simple, one-page tax reform bill within a couple of days in January. Tell it not to Vermont Connecticut Royster!

There is, of course, much to be said for journalistic as for judicial restraint. It would save the readers much silly comment, like the present. Also, it would save the papers a lot of expensive ink and newsprint, but there are some awkward difficulties.

If we waited for clarity in public officials and in ourselves, who would ever speak? Who, on this principle, could comment on Ford's flip-flops on abortion, energy, day-care centers, the Panama Canal, national parks, common-sites picketing, inflation, unemployment, and WIN buttons?

Or Jimmy Carter's mystifying clarifications on grain embargoes, right-to-work laws, "ethnic purity," Clarence Kelley, spending, saving and other inconsistencies and contradictions?

What would we say about the Catholic bishops who want a constitutional amendment forbidding abortion? Or their pressure on Carter to support them in fear of losing the mythical Catholic vote? The bishops are speaking out of sincere religious conviction, which must be respected, but there is no more chance of getting two-thirds of the Congress and three-fourths of the states to outlaw abortion than there is to get a constitutional amendment to outlaw sin. Here, doubt between clashing principles and between the rights and separation of church and state would compel silence.

I thought of the woodpecker alarm this morning when I awakened and must say I was every bit as startled to hear the rain.

The Farmer disked the ground yesterday in preparation for sowing wheat. As he disked, the dirt blew in such clouds he could scarcely see the marks the disk left.

"I hope it rains before I sow the wheat or I will never see the drill marks in the field for the dust," he said last night.

I believed him for he looked like a coal miner just returned to the surface after a hard day in the mine. His clothes were dusty. In fact when he alighted from the tractor and brushed his overalls to shake some of the dust from his clothes, he set up a minor dust storm.

Somewhere in the whirling dust cloud is a man, I thought, though I don't know how he can see nor breathe.

Now that has all changed with the rain . . . . at least for the time being. We will need more, much more to bring the level of moisture up to normal in the soil. But at least the cycle of heat has been broken.

Grapes in various stages of preparation have occupied my time the last few days. Lovely grapes of many varieties grown in our area were given to me for the picking. The dry, torrid days were taking their toll of the fruit.

Yesterday I cooked a portion of them for jam. The day before I canned the juice for making into jelly this winter when I have more time. Today I will cook the remaining grapes for a small glass of jelly and pudding to be devoured immediately, although we have eaten many fresh from the stem.

The aroma of cooking grapes and dripping fruit has filled the house with a delightful scent . . . almost like being in the grape arbor itself.

If it were not so time-consuming, I would make a grape pie. I ate this kind of pie once and thought its flavor was delicious. I have never made one myself because taking the seeds from the grapes requires so much time.

In our area the fruit has fallen from the trees. No doubt it is due to the extreme heat and drought. A man who has raised many varieties of fruit the past years has apples dropping to the ground long before they are ripe, despite his care and attention. He sprayed them five times this season and has kept them well watered.

But now the rain! It has a way of reviving the spirits and one can say, "Maybe next year will be better."

Three Generations Of Giants — Gone

RUSSELL BAKER

NEW YORK — With the death of Mao Tse-tung, the age of giants is closed at last. To mourn it would take a heart of stone, for it has been a barbarian's passage through oceans of blood and the charnel it washed on the shore makes Attila seem in retrospect as fetching as Peck's Bad Boy.

The giants who led it, or perhaps only made the trip first-cabin, were flamboyant egocentrics whose passion for power fulfilled their age's hunger for new societies organized on the principle of industrial efficiency. This carried most of them toward centralized government constructed around political godheads with mythic or divine characteristics being attributed to the leader, whether he was called Der Fuhrer, Il Duce, the Generalissimo, the Chairman, El Caudillo or the President.

The characteristic political creation of the age of giants was dictatorship, and the characteristic political philosophy, which still survives it in such vestigial artifacts as the CIA and KGB, was that the end justifies the means. Not surprisingly, the citizenry for whom the giants labored became an inhuman abstraction — the masses or the people. Persons who made a to-do about their individuality became nuisances, eccentrics or menaces. The attitude varied from giant to giant, but on balance it was not a good time to be at odds with the will of the people, to be a person. The age gave us no persons' republics.

An exception should be made for Winston Churchill, the one giant of the age who was, in fact, not of the age at all, but a creature of Edwardian England who was still able to sentimentalize war and visualize a future in which the masses would not insist on pressing their power too rudely. Britain rejected him as an antique as soon as the Nazis surrendered.

Time magazine once hailed Churchill as the man of the century. The accolade now seems as amusing as calling World War I the war to end wars. In the age of giants, Churchill was not even a very big giant.

From Lenin, who opened the age in 1917, to Mao, whose death closes it three generations later, there were giant giants, middle-sized giants, mini-giants, midget giants and false giants. The classic specimen of the last category was Chiang Kai-shek, who was inflated so alarmingly by Roosevelt and Churchill that it took Americans a generation to perceive that the castle housed only a mouse.

Francisco Franco was, to a degree, the similar creation of Hitler and Mussolini. De Gaulle sought the gift of inflation from Roosevelt and Churchill, was rejected, went away angry and came back years later to earn the seven-league boots for himself by restoring a France at the edge of breakdown.

Hitler and Stalin, the purest specimens of the age's giant breed, were almost certainly political geniuses, which leaves little more to be said about politics in the 20th Century. Lunacy harnessed to industrialism in the cause of mass uplift. Dreams of perfecting humanity with the bullet in the back of the head and the gas oven. Nasty stuff, but infectious to sanity. Twenty years later Americans were destroying Vietnam to save it.

The age of giants, of course, has actually been over for a long time now, and we are slipping into the age of caretakers. The giants were great biographies and good copy, the caretakers are mostly a yawn. Witness Ford and Carter trying to persuade us that they are up to something vital. Witness Brezhnev the committee chairman in Moscow. Name quickly the prime ministers of Italy, Britain, Japan and Israel. Who is the president of France?

There is scarcely a biography in the bunch. Carter and Ford between them are hardly interesting enough to sustain a magazine article. And isn't it splendid? With no giants strutting around shaking the earth, something vaguely resembling peace has become palpable. Vietnam may have been the last gasp of the age of giants in America.

A case can be argued that it was Kennedy's, Johnson's and Nixon's insistence on trying to preserve gianthood in the presidency that accounted for the Asian fiasco, that they were men reluctant to accept the death of the age of giants, or too slow to perceive that it was over and that giants were no longer possible.

There is a glimpse of sunshine in this conjecture. If the giants, from Lenin to Mao, were not really giants but only expressions of an historic global impulse toward cataclysmic change, then it may be that the rise of the caretakers reflects the arrival of a new epoch in which we want consolidation and stability and, yes, societies that will give us the opportunity to use such gains as the bloodletting netted us to search for our lost individualism.

From A Fast Sitting Position

MARQUIS CHILDS

WASHINGTON — Running for president from the White House, as Gerald Ford is doing, has certain distinct advantages. In the first place, it is much easier on the feet and on the digestive system than barnstorming across the country.

Even though you have never been elected to the office, you stand before that great facade that every American knows is the shrine of authority.

The President in office catches it both ways. When he was campaigning around the country in an effort to outpace Ronald Reagan, he was criticized for neglecting the job. But now that he has apparently decided that the surest way to get another four years is to identify with the highest office in the land, he is charged by the opposition with hiding within the White House.

There are practical advantages that the incumbent president has and the edge of incumbency could elect Ford in a close election — the edge being the goodies he has to hand out to deserving Republicans.

Currently 10 vacancies on regulatory agencies are to be filled. These are posts with a tenure of six or seven years and they pay salaries of $40,000 a year or more. Here are openings to reward faithful party members and thereby enlarge the circle of the President's influence.

Among the regulatory agencies with vacancies still to be filled are the Federal Power Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Nuclear Regulatory Agency and the Federal Trade Commission.

Even if the President is defeated, by filling these agencies with conservatives whose views match his, the influence thereby established can extend far into the future in areas vital to the American economy. It was the line followed by President Richard Nixon who left a heritage of rightists in vital agencies.

Even if merely in a negative way, by holding up decisions the power of the regulatory agencies is great and anyone who believes that the selections are objective in terms of knowledge and background need only look at the record of past years.

Congress is holding up many of the President's nominations in the belief that if Jimmy Carter wins on Nov. 2 other — and presumably Democratic names — will be sent up to the Hill.

Through Democratic and Republican administrations, the power of government over wide areas of business operation has been a fact of life regardless of political ideologies. Nowhere has this been more evident than in aviation.

The Civil Aeronautics Board recently overruled the findings of its own law judges to award a trans-Atlantic route to Delta Airlines from Houston, Fort Worth and Atlanta. At the same time, instead of renewing Pan American's rights for Scandinavia, the CAB substituted Northwest, which has never had a trans-Atlantic run.

These decisions come in the face of Pan Am's efforts over 30 years to obtain rights to fly to cities within the continental United States. This comes, too, in the midst of Pan Am's continuing struggle to survive serious losses. More than 12,000 employes have been dismissed in the course of that struggle.

The President must now approve or disapprove the CAB's findings. If he rejects the Board's 3 to 1 decision for Delta and Northwest, he will gain the ill will of those carriers.

The action of the CAB comes, too, in the face of a demand by the British for a new Anglo-American agreement to reduce the number of flights between the two nations, giving British Airways about half of the surviving total instead of the 34% which the British state-owned company now has. Inherent in the demand is a threat that if agreement is not reached by next June 1 the British will feel free to unilaterally break with present arrangements.

For 30 years Pan Am, which pioneered many of the world routes and continued to fly them even at a loss, has been refused entry into the United States, with the exception, of course, of the coastal ports.

The administration chose this moment to issue a highly generalized statement on international air policy directly bearing on the present controversy: "All U.S. international carriers should be permitted to have domestic traffic systems to feed traffic to their international operations." If this means anything, it means Pan Am.

Running from the White House has disadvantages, too. By a kind of rule of thumb, for every one man appointed to a post by the President, 10 office-seekers are estranged. But that is a small price to pay for the trappings of power.

Burglars Take $300,000 In Tiny Cornlea

Cornlea (AP) — It was warm and the crickets chirped as Mylen Weggener watched the last combine-carrying truck rumble out of his auction yard into the Nebraska midnight Saturday.

Weggener's monthly farm machinery auction is the biggest newsmaker in this village of 54. This week, folks in Howard Bender's grocery and Francis Korth's tavern are talking about the $300,000 burglary committed after Weggener locked up that night.

"I can't think of anything else, dollarwise, that approaches this as a burglary loss," said Lt. Marvin Gifford of the Nebraska State Patrol.

Slightly more than $300,000 in checks and about $800 in cash was taken.

"I'm surprised it hasn't happened sooner," town board chairman Bender said. "It's nothing for them to run $1 million through on an auction day."

"This town is in the highway," said Platte County Deputy Sheriff Charlie Wangler. "I suppose you could say the company was negligent to leave that much cash and receipts around, but in this country, people don't expect something like this. Everybody's pretty shook up."

Weggener said he and Mark Noonan have built their auction business to the point where "if you mention Cornlea in farming circles, everybody knows where it is."

Bidders come from all 48 contiguous states and Canada and Mexico to dicker on used tractors and combines that sell for as much as $30,000. "A lot of dollars change hands," said Weggener. "We didn't have as many Mexican buyers this time because the peso has devalued. They usually deal in cash. If they had come, we would have made a trip to the bank."

"We're packed on auction day," said tavern owner Korth. "You'll see 600 to 1,000 people in town."

Wangler was to meet with an FBI agent Wednesday for tips on how to track down the burglars.

G.I. Headstart Program Flooded With Applications

Grand Island (UPI) — The director of the Headstart program in Grand Island Wednesday said she was shocked at the number of applications received from parents trying to enroll their children in the program.

Mariam Ramirez said because the program is only designed to handle 60 children, about 100 applications that have been submitted cannot be processed.

"We thought we would have problems finding enough children that were eligible under our income guidelines" for the program, Mrs. Ramirez said.

The program, funded by the Office of Child Development and sponsored by the Hall County Board, serves 60 children between the ages of 3 and 5 in Hall, Hamilton and Merrick Counties, she said. Grand Island has two Headstart centers, and Aurora and Woodriver have one center each.

The teacher-student ratio in the program has to be one-to-five, Mrs. Ramirez said, meaning no more than 60 children can be allowed in the program.

However, she said, she is looking for other sources of funding, which could lead to expanding the program. Two possible sources are United Way and private individuals, she said.

Woman Cadet's Toughest Task Is Adjustment

Norma Blunck of Osmond, one of 119 women who entered the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., last July, said the hardest part of the academy has been adjusting to the environment.

She said the lack of privacy and having all one's decisions made by a higher authority is totally different from the experience she had attending the University of Nebraska-Lincoln last year.

Miss Blunck said about 100 of those women entering in July remain. That dropout rate, she said, is no higher than that for males.

Stamford Partition Benefits Uneven

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Stamford — Though this school's reorganization hassle is yet to be finalized, it appears Alma is winning out in enrollment and athletics.

But Orleans is likely to come out on top tax-wise

That's assuming that Stamford district patrons sign over their land this month to other districts in the percentages anticipated. The actual ratio will be known with the arrival of an Oct. 1. deadline.

Under a Harlan County District Court agreement of July 29, Stamford continues this year as a Class II district but operating only a K-6 program. It is contracting to send its 31 junior high and high school students to neighboring towns of their choice.

By far the leading choice is Alma with 21, including nine of the district's 11 boys and all nine of these are out for football. Five students are attending Orleans, three Oxford and two Beaver City.

But if the "proportional estimates" of the Stamford administration holds up, Alma will pick up only $678,087 in additional valuation. Yet Orleans will gain $979,768, Oxford $217,397 and Beaver City $171,600

"We won't know for sure until property owners actually sign their preferences, but this appears to be the trend," said Supt. Victor Graham, still bogged down in paperwork following months of controversy over now-dead merger proposals. "Neither side gained very much in the agreement, but hopefully this may be the beginning of something larger."

Looming in the background throughout the varied legal maneuverings of the dispute was the possibility that a county-wide Harlan district will eventually emerge. But the agreement got no closer to this than an unusual stipulation that Alma and Orleans jointly maintain a Stamford elementary attendance center at least for next year.

"As far as I know this will be the first combined operation of this type in the state," said Graham, a veteran of 38 years in education. "At least the court may get the two towns together to this extent. There are hard feelings left over from all this fighting."

Effective July 1 of next year, the Stamford District is to be dissolved and all its land attached to the other four districts according to the wishes of owners. Those indicating no preference will see their property apportioned between Alma and Orleans "as equal as practicable."

It was Stamford's school board which instigated a merger proposal with Alma, later approved by the State Board of School Reorganization but turned down by the county reorganization committee. A Citizens for Action group had pushed instead for merging with Orleans, seven miles away compared to Alma's 14.

The greater busing distance to Alma, repeatedly cited by protesting citizens spokesmen, still draws some fire now that routes actually are in operation. An Alma bus makes morning pickups at the Stamford school, then returns twice in the afternoon — one trip following football practice.

Eugene "Hoppy" McCue, Alma superintendent, said the transition has been smooth and that "both the kids and their parents seem happy." He suggested that the valuation projections may be premature.

In any event, he continued, the increased enrollment was welcome regardless of the effect on finances.

"It would have been nice if we had got all the district's evaluation through a merger, but we're just tickled to death to get the kids," he stated. "In the face of declining enrollments, we know we have to have students to maintain our present program. It's educational benefits which should come first."

While McCue minimized the athletic gain to Alma, Graham acknowledged that it was a big factor in prompting the closing of Stamford's high school. Even playing eight-man football, it was apparent the Bulldogs would be short of manpower in the near future.

Festival On Despite Poor Apple Crop

Nebraska City (UPI) — Despite one of the worst apple crops on record, the Nebraska City Applejack Festival is set for Saturday.

Mrs. William Oberdieck said this year's apple crop is the shortest on record in 50 years of the Kimmel Orchards.

"We had an unusually mild winter and spring," she said. "Then when the apples were about an inch in size, sometime in May, we had that killing frost. We had hail on top of that. We do have some cider."

Jim Gress of Cantron Orchards apparently fared the best of Nebraska City apple growers. He said he has about 60% of his regular crop.

The night of the big May freeze, Gress said, he set out 2,000 heat units in his orchard. "If I'd had 4,000 units, I could have saved them all," he said.

Applejack Festival activities include a Saturday afternoon parade, followed by a water barrel fight and an evening Apple Bowl football game at Hayward Park.

Stamford Partition Benefits Uneven

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Stamford — Though this school's reorganization hassle is yet to be finalized, it appears Alma is winning out in enrollment and athletics.

But Orleans is likely to come out on top tax-wise.

That's assuming that Stamford district patrons sign over their land this month to other districts in the percentages anticipated. The actual ratio will be known with the arrival of an Oct. 1. deadline.

Under a Harlan County District Court agreement of July 29, Stamford continues this year as a Class II district but operating only a K-6 program. It is contracting to send its 31 junior high and high school students to neighboring towns of their choice.

By far the leading choice is Alma with 21, including nine of the district's 11 boys and all nine of these are out for football. Five students are attending Orleans, three Oxford and two Beaver City.

But if the "proportional estimates" of the Stamford administration holds up, Alma will pick up only $678,087 in additional valuation. Yet Orleans will gain $979,768, Oxford $217,397 and Beaver City $171,600.

"We won't know for sure until property owners actually sign their preferences, but this appears to be the trend," said Supt. Victor Graham, still bogged down in paperwork following months of controversy over now-dead merger proposals. "Neither side gained very much in the agreement, but hopefully this may be the beginning of something larger."

Looming in the background throughout the varied legal maneuverings of the dispute was the possibility that a county-wide Harlan district will eventually emerge. But the agreement got no closer to this than an unusual stipulation that Alma and Orleans jointly maintain a Stamford elementary attendance center at least for next year.

"As far as I know this will be the first combined operation of this type in the state," said Graham, a veteran of 38 years in education. "At least the court may get the two towns together to this extent. There are hard feelings left over from all this fighting."

Effective July 1 of next year, the Stamford District is to be dissolved and all its land attached to the other four districts according to the wishes of owners. Those indicating no preference will see their property apportioned between Alma and Orleans "as equal as practicable."

It was Stamford's school board which instigated a merger proposal with Alma, later approved by the State Board of School Reorganization but turned down by the county reorganization committee. A Citizens for Action group had pushed instead for merging with Orleans, seven miles away compared to Alma's 14.

The greater busing distance to Alma, repeatedly cited by protesting citizens spokesmen, still draws some fire now that routes actually are in operation. An Alma bus makes morning pickups at the Stamford school, then returns twice in the afternoon — one trip following football practice.

Eugene "Hoppy" McCue, Alma superintendent, said the transition has been smooth and that "both the kids and their parents seem happy." He suggested that the valuation projections may be premature.

In any event, he continued, the increased enrollment was welcome regardless of the effect on finances.

"It would have been nice if we had got all the district's evaluation through a merger, but we're just tickled to death to get the kids," he stated. "In the face of declining enrollments, we know we have to have students to maintain our present program. It's educational benefits which should come first."

While McCue minimized the athletic gain to Alma, Graham acknowledged that it was a big factor in prompting the closing of Stamford's high school. Even playing eight-man football, it was apparent the Bulldogs would be short of manpower in the near future.

Festival On Despite Poor Apple Crop

Nebraska City (UPI) — Despite one of the worst apple crops on record, the Nebraska City Applejack Festival is set for Saturday.

Mrs. William Oberdieck said this year's apple crop is the shortest on record in 50 years of the Kimmel Orchards.

"We had an unusually mild winter and spring," she said. "Then when the apples were about an inch in size, sometime in May, we had that killing frost. We had hail on top of that. We do have some cider."

Jim Gress of Cantron Orchards apparently fared the best of Nebraska City apple growers. He said he has about 60% of his regular crop.

The night of the big May freeze, Gress said, he set out 2,000 heat units in his orchard. "If I'd had 4,000 units, I could have saved them all," he said.

Applejack Festival activities include a Saturday afternoon parade, followed by a water barrel fight and an evening Apple Bowl football game at Hayward Park.

Wayne Resigns From Municipal Power Pool

By United Press International

The Wayne City Council Tuesday voted to withdraw from the Nebraska Municipal Power Pool, but the pool's general manager Wednesday said he has not received formal notice of the withdrawal.

The non-profit organization was formed in January 1976, by 19 municipalities, according to general manager H. Steve Wacker. Another six groups, including Wayne, have since joined, he said.

Wayne city administrator Fred Brink Tuesday said the power pool doesn't appear to have any value for the City of Wayne because of the city's interconnector agreement with the Nebraska Public Power District.

The pool appears to have taken a course that is opposite of the purpose of the pool that was announced when it was formed, Brink said.

One of the organization's purposes was to serve as a watchdog over NPPD rates, he said, adding that there are any number of federal agencies serving as watchdogs over power rates.

Wacker said the pool was designed to be a joint action organization to provide alternatives to power. A city can withdraw from the pool if it doesn't think it is benefiting from the organization, he said.

"There are no federal or state regulatory agencies that regulate public power districts in Nebraska," Wacker said. "So industry has to maintain some type of interindustry rate regulations.

"We feel the pool is providing an active roll for the municipals," he said. "We're a joint action agency that is the nucleus of rural power districts and municipal utilities."

Wacker said pool members include cities generating their own power and those who buy NPPD power wholesale. Each member pays dues based on the amount of energy each uses.

Brink said Wayne's annual dues amounted to $2,000.

The dues are used primarily to maintain the pool's Lincoln office, Wacker said, adding any additional projects are supported by the members participating in the projects. Slightly more than $100,000 in dues was collected last year, he said, and paid for general operating costs and establishing the corporation.

Wayne's withdrawal from the pool means the city doesn't feel it's benefiting from the organization, Wacker said.

"We're here to service the needs of the community," he said. "If the community feels we cannot provide them with service, then we shouldn't provide them with service."

New Water Resources Group Executive Director Takes Over

Mrs. Pat Patitz of Lincoln has taken over as executive director of the Nebraska Water Resources Association, according to Donald Wagner, association president.

The Lincoln woman replaces Dan S. Jones Jr., who has filled the post on a part-time basis during the past year.

Mrs. Patitz has been the administrative assistant to the executive director and lobbyist for the Nebraska Association of Resources Districts. In addition, she has been serving as secretary-treasurer and news editor for the Nebraska Water Resources Association.

Active in civic organizations, she is presently vice president of the Cornhusker Council, Boy Scouts of America, and president of the Lincoln unit of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Creighton Law Dean Frankino To Leave Next July

Omaha (UPI) — The dean of Creighton University's School of Law, credited with developing one of the foremost legal learning facilities in the nation, has submitted his resignation effective next July 1.

Steven P. Frankino, who became Creighton's fifth law dean on Aug. 1, 1971, said he had accepted a "new position which represents a challenging career opportunity."

The dean said the early notice of his resignation was to give the university a "comfortable period" to find a successor.

Frankino said he was unable to discuss any details regarding his new position or location and could not until sometime next spring.

Frankino is credited with the design of the two-year-old Ahmanson Law Center at Creighton which is regarded as a model for legal learning facilities in the United States.

Haitian Engineers End UNL Studies

Four engineers from the Republic of Haiti have completed five weeks of study at the University of Nebraska College of Engineering and Technology designed to help them maintain Haiti's developing road system.

The students, Christian Pierre Souffrant, 34; Clervil Louis, 31, Jean Joseph Michely, 30, and Marie Suze Gesse, 25, will be supervising maintenance workers on roads now being built in Haiti by French and Canadian construction firms.

The students were sent by the Haitian government to Nebraska at the suggestion of the Lincoln-based Hoskins-Western-Sonderegger, Inc., an engineering consulting firm which has counselors in Haiti.

Creighton Law Dean Frankino To Leave Next July

Omaha (UPI) — The dean of Creighton University's School of Law, credited with developing one of the foremost legal learning facilities in the nation, has submitted his resignation effective next July 1.

Steven P. Frankino, who became Creighton's fifth law dean on Aug. 1, 1971, said he had accepted a "new position which represents a challenging career opportunity."

The dean said the early notice of his resignation was to give the university a "comfortable period" to find a successor.

Frankino said he was unable to discuss any details regarding his new position or location and could not until sometime next spring.

Frankino is credited with the design of the two-year-old Ahmanson Law Center at Creighton which is regarded as a model for legal learning facilities in the United States.

Haitian Engineers End UNL Studies

Four engineers from the Republic of Haiti have completed five weeks of study at the University of Nebraska College of Engineering and Technology designed to help them maintain Haiti's developing road system.

The students, Christian Pierre Souffrant, 34; Clervil Louis, 31; Jean Joseph Michely, 30, and Marie Suze Gesse, 25, will be supervising maintenance workers on roads now being built in Haiti by French and Canadian construction firms.

The students were sent by the Haitian government to Nebraska at the suggestion of the Lincoln-based Hoskins-Western-Sonderegger, Inc., an engineering consulting firm which has counselors in Haiti.

Judge Denies Order Asked By Guardsman

By United Press International

Lancaster County District Judge Herbert Ronin Wednesday denied a request for a temporary restraining order to block the Nebraska National Guard from holding a forced retirement hearing for Maj. Robert Van Valkenberg of Lincoln.

However, the guard did agree to postpone the hearing for a time and adopt procedures so that "due process would be accorded," said Van Valkenberg's attorney, Brian Ridenour of Lincoln.

The decision was reached in Ronin's chambers.

The retirement hearing was originally scheduled for Thursday. Maj. Gen. Francis Winner, Nebraska adjutant general, scheduled it after he wrote a letter Sept. 3 saying the guard planned to retire Van Valkenburg "for cause."

The letter alleged that Van Valkenburg told a newspaper reporter the Pentagon planned a "major investigation" into the Nebraska guard and that he told Brig. Gen. George Fairchild that Col. John J. Siefkus was "out to get" Fairchild. Siefkus is Van Valkenburg's immediate superior. Winner said Van Valkenburg told the same reporter a public debate with Siefkus would reveal that Siefkus was a "bad apple."

The letter also said Van Valkenburg told another officer "Winner was in trouble and on his way out" and that Col. Burl Johnson, deputy adjutant general, was trying to get the job.

The temporary restraining order was requested in connection with a lawsuit Van Valkenburg filed contending state laws allowing the guard to retire its members for cause is unconstitutional.

Van Valkenburg, an Army National Guard pilot, has been with the guard for 20 years, three of them spent on active duty.

Ridenour said the agreement by the State Justice Department to conduct a hearing with due process safeguards does satisfy some of their objections. But the lawsuit remains on the books.

Van Valkenburg said "in view of my personal dedication to the National Guard, I feel strongly compelled to see this through to the end."

Ridenour said the retirement statute in question presents a series of legal questions. For one thing, he said guardsmen can be retired for cause but the law does not list what those causes might be.

Two Bond Issues Faced By Fort Calhoun Voters

Fort Calhoun (AP) — Two special bond issues will be facing voters in Fort Calhoun later this month and at the Nov. 2 general election.

On Sept. 28 residents will be asked to cast their ballots for or against a $495,000 bond issue for an addition to the elementary school.

Supt. Andrew Hansen said the bonds would be paid off over 20 years by a 6.9 mill increase in the school property tax levy.

Enrollment in the Fort Calhoun schools has climbed from 200 students in all grades in 1969 to a total of 570 at the present time.

Hansen said most of the increase is a result of persons moving out of Omaha and into Washington County and the Fort Calhoun district.

On Nov. 2 residents will vote on whether or not to accept a $300,000 loan to build a new water system.

The Farmers Home administration has approved making the 5%, 40-year loan but residents must approve it.

Another $880,000 in federal grants would be used to improve the water system, which has had problems in the past.

Safety Board Urges Rules For Pipe Coupling

Washington (AP) — The fatal natural gas explosion that ripped through a Nebraska hotel last January occurred because cold weather caused a plastic natural gas line to contract and pull loose from an inadequate joint, federal accident investigators said Wednesday.

Twenty persons died and 39 other persons were injured when the explosion ripped through the Pathfinder Hotel in Fremont, Neb., on Jan. 10.

The National Transportation Safety Board found the escaping gas seeped into the hotel basement rather than to the surface because the surface was paved and frozen. The board said it could not determine what ignited the natural gas.

The safety board said the accident demonstrated anew the need for federal action to determine when compression couplers could be safely used to join natural gas lines — particularly plastic pipes, which contract more than metal lines. The board noted it found in a 1973 report that these couplers had been involved in other accidents where pipe contracted and pulled out of the coupling.

Compression couplers work by tightening up around the pipe, depending on the resulting friction to keep the pipe from slipping loose. The safety board said this type of coupling normally will keep gas from escaping but that it offers little protection against longitudinal forces such as contraction.

In contrast, positive transition couplers, which are recommended for use when installing plastic pipe in lengths of more than 100 feet, offers good longitudinal protection, the board said. Those fittings are fused to the plastic and welded to the metal.

The safety board noted the plastic line was installed in the summer of 1974, when temperatures averaged about 73 degrees. It estimated the pipe contracted enough during the first winter so that less than half an inch remained inside the coupler. The second winter was even colder and the pipe contracted enough to pull loose from the fitting.

The agency found several problems with the way the plastic pipe had been connected. The pipe was installed in a 348-foot length even though the manufacturer stated it would contract more than steel lines and should be installed in no more than 100 foot segments if compression couplers were being used.

It found the pipe was not cut as well as it should have been and that the pipe was not aligned correctly when it was inserted into the compression coupling, both of which made it easier for the pipe to pull loose.

And it found the workmen used parts built by two different manufacturers to make the compression coupling. They used a "stiffener" — the metal sleeve put inside the pipe to give it strength for the coupling—that was manufactured by the pipe manufacturer but used a compression coupler built by a second manufacturer. The combination resulted in a joint that was weaker than the plastic pipe section being joined.

Contaminated Cheese Recalled In Nebraska

Washington (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration Wednesday announced the recall of cheddar cheese, shad roe and canned mushrooms because of various types of contamination.

The Pasteurized Kansas cheddar cheese was distributed in 40-pound blocks in Colorado, New Mexico, Wyoming, Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota and Missouri. The FDA said the product was contaminated with salmonella.

The cheese was manufactured by Whiting Foods of Horton, Kan., and recalled by Nobel, Inc., Westman Commission Co. and Giam Brocco Products Co., all of Denver, Colo.

The FDA said it was estimated that 10,000 pounds of the cheese were on the market when the recall began, but the recall now has been completed.

The shad roe was in 7½-ounce cans under three labels — Rubinstein's Fancy Shad Roe, Shad Roe (San Marino Preserving Kitchen) and Reese Extra Fancy Shad Roe — distributed nationwide.

The FDA said the manufacturer, Cowlitz Fish Co. of Kelso, Wash., estimated that 3,480 of the cans still were on the market. The recall was conducted because the fish was underprocessed and "may pose a potential for bacterial outgrowth," the FDA said.

The mushrooms, in 8-ounce cans, were Ostrom's Mushrooms (Pieces and Stems), manufactured by the Nottingham Canning Co., of Nottingham, Pa.

They were recalled from the states of Washington, Arkansas, Montana and Utah by Ostrom Mushroom Farms of Olympia, Wash., because the products were decomposed.

Omaha Teacher Faces Charge Of Raping Girl

Omaha (AP) — A high school physical education teacher charged with raping a 16-year-old girl was released from custody Tuesday without bond.

James E. Smith, 22, a Northwest High School teacher, is charged with first-degree sexual assault.

Municipal Court Judge Francis McLane ordered the Omaha Bar Assn's Pretrial Release Program to supervise Smith's activities until further court action.

Police said Smith was arrested about 10 p.m. Monday near Benson High School where the alleged victim's older brother had physically detained him after the girl reported she was assaulted near Gallagher Park.

Dr. Ron Anderson, the Omaha School District's assistant superintendent for personnel, said Smith will not return to the classroom until school officials decide whether to take action.

Smith taught at Central High School last year.

Kearney Residents Debate Merits Of Home Business

Kearney (UPI) — The Kearney City Council Tuesday was asked by residents who operate businesses in their homes to change a city ordinance to make their home shops legal.

About 12 businesses are known to be operated in residents' homes, including a dentist office and a beauty shop.

At one time, city laws allowed home-operated businesses, provided they were operated by family members.

Elaine Bragg, Owner and operator of a home beauty shop, urged the council to amend present city laws restricting her from legally operating her home business.

Mrs. Bragg's customers testified in her favor, saying the shop was convenient. But her neighbors opposed the idea, complaining the beauty shop was a nuisance.

Council member Carrol Sheldon recommended that the council delay action until more input can be received and examined. The council agreed, and is expected to decide the matter at its October meeting.

Flight Insurance For Blind To Be Same As Anyone's

Omaha (AP) — A spokesman for Mutual of Omaha said Tuesday an affiliate no longer will limit flight insurance coverage for blind persons.

A blind Iowan filed a complaint with Iowa Insurance Commissioner Herbert Anderson in July because Tele-Trip Co. Inc., a Mutual affiliate, would not sell him the same amount of flight insurance as it would a sighted person.

At the time, Mutual said the restriction was justified because a blind person was considered a greater travel risk.

A spokesman said Tuesday, however, that Mutual rechecked its records after the complaint was filed, contacted other flight insurers and found that blind persons did not represent a greater risk.

Blind persons now will be able to buy up to $375,000 in-flight coverage, the same as sighted persons. The limit for the blind formerly was $225,000.

The agency found several problems with the way the plastic pipe had been connected. The pipe was installed in a 348-foot length even though the manufacturer stated it would contract more than steel lines and should be installed in no more than 100 foot segments if compression couplers were being used.

It found the pipe was not cut as well as it should have been and that the pipe was not aligned correctly when it was inserted into the compression coupling, both of which made it easier for the pipe to pull loose.

And it found the workmen used parts built by two different manufacturers to make the compression coupling. They used a "stiffener" — the metal sleeve put inside the pipe to give it strength for the coupling—that was manufactured by the pipe manufacturer but used a compression coupler built by a second manufacturer. The combination resulted in a joint that was weaker than the plastic pipe section being joined.

Contaminated Cheese Recalled In Nebraska

Washington (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration Wednesday announced the recall of cheddar cheese, shad roe and canned mushrooms because of various types of contamination.

The Pasteurized Kansas cheddar cheese was distributed in 40-pound blocks in Colorado, New Mexico, Wyoming, Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota and Missouri. The FDA said the product was contaminated with salmonella.

The cheese was manufactured by Whiting Foods of Horton, Kan., and recalled by Nobel, Inc., Westman Commission Co. and Giam Brocco Products Co., all of Denver, Colo.

The FDA said it was estimated that 10,000 pounds of the cheese were on the market when the recall began, but the recall now has been completed.

The shad roe was in 7½-ounce cans under three labels — Rubinstein's Fancy Shad Roe, Shad Roe (San Marino Preserving Kitchen) and Reese Extra Fancy Shad Roe — distributed nationwide.

The FDA said the manufacturer, Cowlitz Fish Co. of Kelso, Wash., estimated that 3,480 of the cans still were on the market. The recall was conducted because the fish was underprocessed and "may pose a potential for bacterial outgrowth," the FDA said.

The mushrooms, in 8-ounce cans, were Ostrom's Mushrooms (Pieces and Stems), manufactured by the Nottingham Canning Co., of Nottingham, Pa.

They were recalled from the states of Washington, Arkansas, Montana and Utah by Ostrom Mushroom Farms of Olympia, Wash., because the products were decomposed.

Omaha Teacher Faces Charge Of Raping Girl

Omaha (AP) — A high school physical education teacher charged with raping a 16-year-old girl was released from custody Tuesday without bond.

James E. Smith, 22, a Northwest High School teacher, is charged with first-degree sexual assault.

Municipal Court Judge Francis McLane ordered the Omaha Bar Assn's Pretrial Release Program to supervise Smith's activities until further court action.

Police said Smith was arrested about 10 p.m. Monday near Benson High School where the alleged victim's older brother had physically detained him after the girl reported she was assaulted near Gallagher Park.

Dr. Ron Anderson, the Omaha School District's assistant superintendent for personnel, said Smith will not return to the classroom until school officials decide whether to take action.

Smith taught at Central High School last year.

Kearney Residents Debate Merits Of Home Business

Kearney (UPI) — The Kearney City Council Tuesday was asked by residents who operate businesses in their homes to change a city ordinance to make their home shops legal.

About 12 businesses are known to be operated in residents' homes, including a dentist office and a beauty shop.

At one time, city laws allowed home-operated businesses, provided they were operated by family members.

Elaine Bragg, Owner and operator of a home beauty shop, urged the council to amend present city laws restricting her from legally operating her home business.

Mrs. Bragg's customers testified in her favor, saying the shop was convenient. But her neighbors opposed the idea, complaining the beauty shop was a nuisance.

Council member Carrol Sheldon recommended that the council delay action until more input can be received and examined. The council agreed, and is expected to decide the matter at its October meeting.

Flight Insurance For Blind To Be Same As Anyone's

Omaha (AP) — A spokesman for Mutual of Omaha said Tuesday an affiliate no longer will limit flight insurance coverage for blind persons.

A blind Iowan filed a complaint with Iowa Insurance Commissioner Herbert Anderson in July because Tele-Trip Co. Inc., a Mutual affiliate, would not sell him the same amount of flight insurance as it would a sighted person.

At the time, Mutual said the restriction was justified because a blind person was considered a greater travel risk.

A spokesman said Tuesday, however, that Mutual rechecked its records after the complaint was filed, contacted other flight insurers and found that blind persons did not represent a greater risk.

Blind persons now will be able to buy up to $375,000 in-flight coverage, the same as sighted persons. The limit for the blind formerly was $225,000.

Varner Defends Formula For Comparing Campuses

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

University of Nebraska President D. B. Varner Wednesday defended the formula used to figure the difference in financial support between the Lincoln and Omaha campuses.

Varner assembled the local media at a press conference to explain the parity formula, history and process because he felt there had been a misunderstanding of the issue.

The confusion might be "the seeds of continuing bitterness that serves the university poorly," Varner said.

The formula shows that UNO is underfunded by $1,068,000 compared to UNL, and last week UN Regents approved seeking $500,000 of this money for next fiscal year.

"I reluctantly admit that formulas aren't perfect," said Varner after his staff explained the computations used to arrive at the $1 million amount.

"I think this is a reasonable approach. You have to do something you can live with and can defend across the state and to the Legislature," Varner said.

A six-member committee composed of central office personnel and representatives from the two campuses merged formulas developed for the Universities of Illinois and Wisconsin.

But the decision wasn't unanimous. UNL Faculty Senate President Henry Baumgarten, a member of that committee, drafted a minority report taking issue with the formula's basic assumptions.

Baumgarten concluded that there is no evidence showing that a funding inequity between the two campuses either exists or doesn't exist.

After stories and editorials on the minority report appeared in Lincoln papers, Varner called the press conference to "get all the facts" out about the special committee's work and recommendations.

News representatives were given a stack of information about the formula and the committee's work. Missing from that stack was Baumgarten's minority report.

Varner said the issue of salary comparability, raised by some UNO faculty members about four years ago, led to studies on both salary and program support comparability.

The formula approach to Lincoln and Omaha budgets was innevitable, to prevent "civil war every year" in the Legislature, said Varner.

The complicated mathematical formula assigned weights to more expensive kinds of programs and to upper level programs. The result was a $2.23 difference between the two campuses on support per student credit hour for 1974-75 or a more than $1 million difference.

Only tuition money and state general tax support were used in arriving at the $1 million figure, Varner said.

The formula approach will not end the bickering between the two campuses, Varner admitted, but he said it was the fairest way to approach the problem.

Unemployment Declines To 4.4% For Nebraska

Unemployment in Lincoln, Omaha and across Nebraska declined in August, the State Labor Department said Wednesday.

Nebraska jobless were 4.4%, down from 4.8% in July and down markedly from 5.5% in August 1975. Of the 713,200 labor force total, 31,300 had no jobs last month while 681,900 had work.

However, the total statewide labor pool declined too from 729,700 in July, when 34,900 were unemployed, and from 717,500 in August 1975 of which 39,200 were out of work.

A Labor Department spokesman cited no particular reasons for the unemployment declines, noting they're basically seasonal with schools reopening.

The national jobless rate in August was 7.9%.

In Lincoln, unemployment improved slightly, dropping from 3.8% in July to 3.7% in August, compared to 4.6% in August a year ago. The statistics last month translate to 3,600 holding no jobs among a total eligible of 97,750. That total has increased by about 2,500 in the past year, meaning fewer persons are unemployed among a larger force.

In Omaha, where high unemployment has been worrying state revenue officials, the rate dropped from 7.9% in July (20,250 jobless) to 7.3% in August (18,450 jobless).

Canadian Firm Denied License To Sell Tractors

By United Press International

State Agriculture Director Glenn Kreuscher announced Wednesday a Canadian firm has been denied permission to sell tractors in Nebraska.

Kreuscher identified the firm as Versatile Manufacturing Ltd., Manitoba.

The director said an investigative hearing in progress since May 7 "has determined that Versatile Manufacturing has not met the requirements of Nebraska statutes requiring the testing of tractors offered for sale in the state."

Driveway Story Names Switched

Names of two of the principals were switched Wednesday morning in the last half of a Star story about the city's tearing out the driveway of Henry Keldsen at 306 F.

In the latter part of the story Keldsen was inadvertently referred to as Kulhanek.

The sidewalk inspector quoted in the story was named Duane Kulhanek, and his name was inadvertently substituted for Keldsen's. The quotations in the last eight paragraphs of the story should have been attributed to Keldsen and not to Kulhanek.

Milo, Beans, Corn Trickle Into Firth Co-op Elevator

Lincoln Star Special

Firth — "We are getting a few loads of milo, a few soybeans and some samples of corn. The harvest isn't underway yet except for a few fields," said Curt Bechtel, manager of the cooperative elevator at Firth.

Bechtel said Wednesday the milo is running from 19 to 23% moisture, the soybeans from 10 to 11.6% moisture and the corn as high as 30% moisture.

"We really haven't had enough corn and soybeans to get a yield estimate, but the milo is running around 60 to 65 bushels an acre. It should improve as we get into the later varieties that normally yield better," he said.

Bechtel said farmers are planting wheat and hoping for rain as they wait for the grain to dry enough to harvest in the corn and milo fields.

Painter Concentrates On Smalltown Vistas

By H. L. HOFFMASTER
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln, Neb , is not the seat of government, law and education in Don Williams' painting, it is the seat of "America the Pleasant

The brainwork, the commerce, the high socioeconomic fretwork is not portrayed

Instead, the exhibition at Sheldon Art Gallery, shows Lincoln as backyard and frontyard Smalltown, U S.A., probably much as we would want to have Lincoln remembered.

Williams uses pastels as narcotics, his forms, colors, designs are blissful

Not only is there nobody sweating, but nobody would dare in one of these paintings . . it wouldn't be nice

His portraits of unpeopled backyards and frontyards are finely tuned and toned with masterful little touches as in "Backyard With Wading Pool." Behind the wading pool is that homely and homey red snow fence to keep the kids in the yard and dramatize the painting.

Wicker chairs, an unplanted garden, hedges and a stone walkway are objects of great style and mood in a town where anyone would love to live.

You might wonder where the people are and if they are, and where they work, what they do — but people who live in backyards like those must be as nice to know as their city.

Williams' countrysides are familiar and as pleasant, but especially the trio "Landscape, East of Lincoln," "Dirtfield, West of Lincoln," "Wheatfield, Southeast of Lincoln "

Everybody who has driven outside of Lincoln has seen those horizons, that greenbelt and the beautiful earth

Williams' show is not all Lincoln oriented, in fact, one of the most remarkable pieces, "Lawn Sprinkler, Woodland, Ca " is from her new home state. Williams, a Lincoln native whose father was former University Theatre director Dallas, now lives in San Francisco.

You could get wet in "Lawn Sprinkler." Williams has lightspecked the water drops with such skill that you find yourself surprised to discover the drops aren't falling

Williams knows enough artistic tricks and knows enough about those tricks that the similar moods of each painting remain fascinating.

He can make a street dominate physically as in "Prospect St , Lincoln," or can excite with the thin green strip of "Dirtfield."

When he finds a dimension that works, he makes it work and then moves on to another dimension, not a spiritual dimension to be sure, for he still seems settled into visual pacifism and ease

The Lincoln of Williams is only partial reality, but it is one of the portional realities we brag about

Feeling The Blues Is No Joke

By HARRY JACKSON
Star Staff Writer

You've felt blue, gloomy—depressed—for a long time. You can't figure out why.

The job is fine—or was fine until you got on this emotional downer. Your family is well and your own health is good.

But you still feel like you should be sad about something.

You search your mind until you find a possibility, a handle.

What do you do, though, if you're wrong?

Three local mental health professionals say don't take the chance, get help.

"Depression can be a valuable thing, as well as a very debilitating thing," said Dr. Ramona Reed, staff psychiatrist for the Lancaster Mental Health Center, 134 S. 14th.

"I see it as valuable by equating feelings of anxiety and depression with physical pain," Dr. Reed said. "Depression and anxiety to the psyche are what physical pain is to the body."

Dr. Reed described depression as "a subjective feeling of not feeling good emotionally. It's feeling blue, on a downer."

Ignore the feelings and they may go away. Or, they may take on worse manifestations: mental illness or even suicide.

"If someone is confused, doesn't know which way to go, I think these are good signals that we should become attuned to," she said. "Unfortunately, we come to think that any time we feel depressed that there is something 'wrong with us.'

"Well, there is something wrong but in the same sense that when you get a pain in your stomach there's something wrong."

Dr. Reed sees about 12 clients on an average day. She estimated about 40 to 50% of her work is with emotionally depressed persons.

Dr. Carlton Paine, a clinical psychologist, said the mental health clinic schedules about 1,500 persons weekly for the agency's three psychiatrists, three psychologists and 12 psychiatric social workers.

"The vast majority come here unhappy about something or else they wouldn't be here," Dr. Paine said.

Women make up the greatest number of those receiving therapy for some form or degree of depression, he said. "The ratio comprises about two to one over men," Dr. Paine said.

But he justified the figures. "Probably as many men as women have emotional problems. But men feel it's beneath their dignity, embarrassing, and that they have to be strong."

"Many men let the problem go too long before seeking help, if they seek help at all," he said.

Speaking about the off-center ratio, Dr. Reed noted, "Although more women attempt suicide, more men are successful."

Fourteen of 20 suicides last year in Lincoln were by men.

"The major cause of depression is loss," Dr. Paine said. "The loss of a job, a person important to you, the loss of self-respect."

It's important to distinguish between feeling blue and gloomy because of an outside problem and depression due to a long-term, internal problem, he said.

Dr. Paine added three criteria for knowing when professional help is needed:

"How long will it last? How intense is it?" Dr. Paine said. "Another clue is when an individual feels depressed and doesn't know why. Then it could be a symptom of a deeper problem.

"It really rests with the individual and those around him," Paine said.

"The important thing is that the people themselves feel it's gone on too long. It doesn't make sense," Dr. Paine said.

"How long is too long is up to the person," he said. "One person may have a headache two days and see a doctor while another may hold on to that headache for three months."

He said a person can start facing the problems with help from a friend, minister or counselor.

And, "there are facilities available," he said. "Even one visit could be beneficial."

Sometimes, though, the counseling route may not be the answer.

Dr. Eli Chesen, a local psychiatrist in private practice, said most of his clients suffer from depression — about 85%.

He said, though, that a large number of those have problems within their nervous systems which bring on depression.

"There are two main categories of depression," Chesen said. "Endogenous: problems with chemical changes in the nervous system, and exogenous. that caused by some precipitating factor, like losing a mate, losing a job."

The second form can be treated with psychotherapy, Chesen said, but the first may need a medical solution.

He said endogenous depression is still being researched. A significant portion of his practice deals with this type of condition. "Private practitioners deal with a different population," Dr. Chesen said.

In any case, persons should seek help if the depression gets too hot to handle, he said.

"A lot of people feel it's something you have to live with but I don't feel that's true," he said. "Any form (of depression) is treatable."

Intersection Off-Limits To Feuders

San Jose, Calif. (UPI) — Peace and tranquility have been restored to the intersection of Settle and Michigan Avenues in Willow Glen by a court-imposed demilitarized zone separating two warring housewives

Municipal Court Judge Edward J Nelson decreed that neither Mrs. Patricia McDaniel nor Mrs. Mary Salierno may come within 100 feet of the center of the intersection.

The women, who live on opposite corners, have been feuding since two of their children got into a playground fracas a year ago. An attorney said there have been at least 20 "person-to-person" encounters.

If either of the women violates the truce zone she will be subjected to a $1,000 fine.

Mrs. McDaniel had filed a suit for $4,000 damages, asserting Mrs Salierno has threatened her with violence a number of times.

Mrs. Salierno, in turn, filed a cross complaint accusing Mrs. McDaniel of subjecting her to "great distress of body and mind and great humiliation in consequence of the unlawful, unjust, wrongful acts."

Judge Nelson said that before setting up the truce zone he twice unsuccessfully ordered the women to quit harassing each other.

The DMZ will be temporary until the Saliernos move in about 60 days. The judge said at that time "the problem obviously will end — I hope."

Playboy Says Male Virginity Up In Colleges

Chicago (UPI) — Women college students are more active sexually but male virginity has grown in the last six years, according to Playboy magazine.

The magazine, reporting the results of its annual college survey, said that 49% of the women polled in 1970 said they graduated as virgins. Only 26% made the same claim this year.

Male virgins increased from 18% in 1970 to 26% in 1976.

"This magical equality of percentages means that students have arrived at that promised land — a sexual utopia where the women are just as active sexually as the men," Playboy said in its October issue.

Researchers chose 20 colleges and universities for their survey, polling a random sampling from school directors. In all, 3,700 students responded.

Feeling The Blues Is No Joke

By HARRY JACKSON
Star Staff Writer

You've felt blue, gloomy—depressed—for a long time. You can't figure out why.

The job is fine—or was fine until you got on this emotional downer. Your family is well and your own health is good.

But you still feel like you should be sad about something.

You search your mind until you find a possibility, a handle.

What do you do, though, if you're wrong?

Three local mental health professionals say don't take the chance, get help.

"Depression can be a valuable thing, as well as a very debilitating thing," said Dr. Ramona Reed, staff psychiatrist for the Lancaster Mental Health Center, 134 S. 14th.

"I see it as valuable by equating feelings of anxiety and depression with physical pain," Dr. Reed said. "Depression and anxiety to the psyche are what physical pain is to the body."

Dr. Reed described depression as "a subjective feeling of not feeling good emotionally. It's feeling blue; on a downer."

Ignore the feelings and they may go away. Or, they may take on worse manifestations: mental illness or even suicide.

"If someone is confused, doesn't know which way to go, I think these are good signals that we should become attuned to," she said. "Unfortunately, we come to think that any time we feel depressed that there is something 'wrong with us.'

"Well, there is something wrong but in the same sense that when you get a pain in your stomach there's something wrong."

Dr. Reed sees about 12 clients on an average day. She estimated about 40 to 50% of her work is with emotionally depressed persons.

Dr. Carlton Paine, a clinical psychologist, said the mental health clinic schedules about 1,500 persons weekly for the agency's three psychiatrists, three psychologists and 12 psychiatric social workers.

"The vast majority come here unhappy about something or else they wouldn't be here," Dr. Paine said.

Women make up the greatest number of those receiving therapy for some form or degree of depression, he said. "The ratio comprises about two to one over men," Dr. Paine said.

But he justified the figures. "Probably as many men as women have emotional problems. But men feel it's beneath their dignity, embarrassing, and that they have to be strong."

"Many men let the problem go too long before seeking help, if they seek help at all," he said.

Speaking about the off-center ratio, Dr. Reed noted, "Although more women attempt suicide, more men are successful."

Fourteen of 20 suicides last year in Lincoln were by men.

"The major cause of depression is loss," Dr. Paine said. "The loss of a job, a person important to you, the loss of self-respect."

It's important to distinguish between feeling blue and gloomy because of an outside problem and depression due to a long-term, internal problem, he said.

Dr. Paine added three criteria for knowing when professional help is needed:

"How long will it last? How intense is it?" Dr. Paine said. "Another clue is when an individual feels depressed and doesn't know why. Then it could be a symptom of a deeper problem.

"It really rests with the individual and those around him," Paine said.

"The important thing is that the people themselves feel it's gone on too long. It doesn't make sense," Dr. Paine said.

"How long is too long is up to the person," he said. "One person may have a headache two days and see a doctor while another may hold on to that headache for three months."

He said a person can start facing the problems with help from a friend, minister or counselor.

And, "there are facilities available," he said. "Even one visit could be beneficial."

Sometimes, though, the counseling route may not be the answer.

Dr. Eli Chesen, a local psychiatrist in private practice, said most of his clients suffer from depression — about 85%.

He said, though, that a large number of those have problems within their nervous systems which bring on depression.

Painter Concentrates On Smalltown Vistas

By H. L. HOFFMASTER
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln, Neb., is not the seat of government, law and education in Don Williams' painting, it is the seat of "America the Pleasant."

The brainwork, the commerce, the high socioeconomic fretwork is not portrayed.

Instead, the exhibition at Sheldon Art Gallery, shows Lincoln as backyard and frontyard Smalltown, U.S.A., probably much as we would want to have Lincoln remembered.

Williams uses pastels as narcotics; his forms, colors, designs are blissful.

Not only is there nobody sweating, but nobody would dare in one of these paintings . . . it wouldn't be nice.

His portraits of unpeopled backyards and frontyards are finely tuned and toned with masterful little touches as in "Backyard With Wading Pool." Behind the wading pool is that homely and homey red snow fence to keep the kids in the yard and dramatize the painting.

Wicker chairs, an unplanted garden, hedges and a stone walkway are objects of great style and mood in a town where anyone would love to live.

You might wonder where the people are and if they are, and where they work, what they do — but people who live in backyards like those must be as nice to know as their city.

Williams' countrysides are familiar and as pleasant, but especially the trio "Landscape, East of Lincoln," "Dirtfield, West of Lincoln," "Wheatfield, Southeast of Lincoln."

Everybody who has driven outside of Lincoln has seen those horizons, that greenbelt and the beautiful earth.

Williams' show is not all Lincoln oriented, in fact, one of the most remarkable pieces, "Lawn Sprinkler, Woodland, Ca." is from her new home state. Williams, a Lincoln native whose father was former University Theatre director Dallas, now lives in San Francisco.

You could get wet in "Lawn Sprinkler." Williams has lightspecked the water drops with such skill that you find yourself surprised to discover the drops aren't falling.

Williams knows enough artistic tricks and knows enough about those tricks that the similar moods of each painting remain fascinating.

He can make a street dominate physically as in "Prospect St., Lincoln," or can excite with the thin green strip of "Dirtfield."

When he finds a dimension that works, he makes it work and then moves on to another dimension, not a spiritual dimension to be sure, for he still seems settled into visual pacifism and ease.

The Lincoln of Williams is only partial reality, but it is one of the portional realities we brag about.

Friend Almost Lives In

DEAR ABBY: I have a neighbor I'll call Sue who has done more for me than my own sister has. Sue's kids are the ages of mine, so she keeps my kids so I can go on the road with my husband for a few days. She also chauffeurs my kids around with her own so I won't have to. Sue has even done my marketing for me

She's a very handy friend to have and I appreciate her, but here's the problem

She runs in and out of my house just like it's her own If she sees that I have company, she comes right over and joins us She asks the most personal questions, and I have no privacy whatsoever She's a good friend, but she's a terrible pest How can I keep her from coming over whenever she feels like it? I don't want to end our friendship because she's been a good friend, but enough is enough

TOO MUCH OF A GOOD THING

DEAR TOO MUCH: By accepting favors from Sue, you've become obligated to her. If you want your privacy, you will have to quit accepting favors from her. If you can't do that, fact it: You've made a deal and you're stuck with it.

You are the dealer and have opened One Spade. Partner responds Two Spades. What would you bid now with each of the following five hands?

2.♠AJ954 ♥AJ73 ♦AQ8 ♣6
3.♠KQ842 ♥QJ6 ♦AJ7 ♣AQ
4.♠AK9643 ♥7 ♦AKJ62 ♣3
5.♠Q875432 ♥A ♦— ♣AKQ74

1. Four spades. You don't need much from partner to come home with ten tricks, and should zoom into game even though you opened with only 12 high-card points. The fact is that when you bid an anemic seven-card suit and partner raises you, your high-card point count does not accurately reflect the real trick-taking value of the hand. Tricks make contracts, not points — and seven-card suits have a habit of producing lots of tricks. You'd surely want to be in game if partner had any one of these hands:

1.♠AK84 ♥73 ♦J762 ♣854
2.♠K1084 ♥964 ♦A83 ♣743
3.♠A104 ♥Q7 ♦943 ♣J8652
4.♠Q1084 ♥942 ♦J5 ♣KJ75

2. Three hearts. Game is likely, though far from certain, and the best way of investigating the possibility is by a trial bid of three hearts. This may induce partner to bid four hearts or four spades, and in either case you would pass. If partner responded three spades, a discouraging bid, it would probably be best to quit then and there.

3. Three notrump. You can't afford to stay out of game, but should give partner a choice between spades and notrump. Two notrump would not be forcing, and would therefore be inadequate.

4. Four notrump. How many tricks can be made depends largely on how many aces partner has — and it's therefore best to use Blackwood at this point. If partner responds five clubs, indicating no aces, you bid five spades. If he responds five diamonds, showing one ace, you jump to six spades. If he unexpectedly responds five hearts, showing two aces, you also bid six spades. Seven would be too risky

5. Five notrump. This is the grand slam force convention; it has nothing to do with Blackwood Partner is required to respond seven spades if, and only if, he has two of the three top trump honors. With only one of them, or neither of them, he signs off at the six level and six spades becomes the final contract.

Federal Cut To Raise Welfare Request

By The Associated Press

A budget analyst said Wednesday a Welfare Department spending request, spurred by imminent loss of $2.5 million in federal funds, will be in the $50 million range for fiscal 1977-78.

Don Leuenberger, analyst in the budget division of the Department of Administrative Services (DAS), said Wednesday that the Welfare Department sought extra time to prepare its budget request in light of the imminent federal cutback.

State agency budget requests were due in the DAS budget office by late Wednesday. The proposals undergo revision by the budget division to form the Exon administration spending guide for submission to the 1977 Unicameral.

Leuenberger said the expected federal fund loss will come from matching amounts in the Medicaid and Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) programs. He said the exact loss figure is unknown.

"It's going to be right around $2 5 million, but we won't know exactly until we get formal notification," he said.

The budget expert said Nebraska's Welfare officials were notified verbally by federal officials of the imminent cutback in matching money, but an official written notice will come later.

Leuenberger said the state would have to cover the loss.

This fiscal year's appropriation for welfare exceeded $46 million, a figure that was expected to increase minimally until the loss of some matching funds in Medicaid and ADC was cranked into the budgeting picture.

Leuenberger said the federal cutback is due to a review conducted every two years of the formula for matching funds.

He indicated the state tab for welfare was curbed due to shrinking programs and continued tight budgeting by the administration Gov. J. James Exon heads.

Welfare is No. 3 among state agencies in terms of state tax (general fund) money, trailing the two behemoths of education — the University of Nebraska system and the State Education Department.

Regents last week decided on a university system budget request of $108 million — plus in state tax money. The Education Department budget request, adopted by the State Board of Education in August, was submitted Wednesday to the DAS budget division as $93.6 million in general fund money.

Committee To Advocate Pay Hike For Legislators

Omaha (UPI) — A committee is again organizing this year to achieve passage of an amendment to the Nebraska constitution to raise the pay of state senators.

Mrs. Barbara Botsh, chairman of the Fair Pay Committee, said Wednesday her group is planning a longer and more extensive campaign than the futile effort in 1974 and is seeking contributions to help pay for it.

Mrs. Botsch, director of governmental affairs for the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce, said the committee could spend more than $30,000 this year, compared to the $15,000 spent in 1975 when voters rejected the $275 per month pay raise proposal by about 20,000 votes.

If Amendment No. 8 on the November ballot is approved, pay for the 49 lawmakers would be increased to $625 per month or $8,100 annually, compared to the present $400 monthly stipend. The senators received their last pay raise in 1968.

Committee To Promote Special Ed Amendment

By The Associated Press

A committee has formed to promote passage of a constitutional amendment that would allow state contracting with non-public schools or agencies for special education.

Citizens for Education of Handicapped Children filed papers Wednesday on formation, submitting them to the office of Secretary of State Allen Beermann.

The committee favors voter approval Nov. 2 of the first part of Amendment 6, which would end the constitutional ban on contracting with private insitutions in the case of training for the handicapped.

Officers of the committee are Judy Nicholsen, Omaha, chairman; Cheryl Glazier, Lincoln, assistant chairman; Joyce Kreski, Omaha, secretary; Luther Schmidt, Hastings, treasurer; Richard Baur, Omaha, assistant treasurer.

Mental Health Commitment Law Criticized By Ill Man's Mother

Omaha (AP) — The Legislature's Public Health and Welfare Committee Tuesday heard witnesses discuss changes in Nebraska's mental health commitment laws and increased state aid to Douglas County for treating the mentally ill.

The witnesses included the mother of a man who she said needs mental treatment but will not commit himself voluntarily to a hospital.

She said the county mental health board is a "brick wall" stopping her son from getting help. The woman said she was told that unless he is proven to be dangerous to himself and others, he cannot be hospitalized against his will.

She said he has not been violent but he might be at any time, and his behavior has caused her to leave her home and "live in hiding" for the last five weeks.

The woman said she is taking legal steps to evict him from her house, but that the stress of being evicted might cause him to react violently.

"I think this is inhuman," she said. "He is ill. Why can't we treat that illness?"

She said two doctors are willing to say he needs mental treatment, but not that he is violent.

Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook said the committee is examining the commitment law to see whether it should be changed.

Several persons testified the law should be changed to include more persons under the involuntary commitment procedure or to simplify the commitment system.

Others said the law is alright, but those who administer it have interpreted it incorrectly.

Several local officials called for more state money for the Douglas County hospital's psychiatric program.

Sen. Steve Fowler of Lincoln said increasing that aid might result in more control by the state, and questioned whether County Hospital should become another state regional mental health center.

Harold Rogers, acting director of County Hospital's mental health center, said admissions have dropped from 140-150 a month to 43 since June 30.

He said that because of publicity, many persons thought the hospital was closing and did not seek psychiatric care there or anywhere.

Poll Says Most Voters Ambivalent About Carter

By LOUIS HARRIS

Louis Harris

Euphoria Fading

Although he is currently enjoying an 11-point lead over President Ford nationally, Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter still strikes most voters as an ambivalent and paradoxical public figure Doubts about him are particularly evident among voters in the largest 10 states of the country, where Carter is ahead by a relatively narrow 44 to 38% with third-party candidate Eugene McCarthy at 7%

In the latest Harris Survey, conducted the past three weeks among a substantial 2 844 likely voters nationwide, a consistent pattern can be seen There has been a noticeable drop in the public's rating of Carter's positive attributes, accompanied by a sharp rise in what they find negative about him In short, the public euphoria about Jimmy Carter, which reached its peak just after the Democratic convention, has now given way to a close second look and a good deal of skeptical questioning

To be sure, Carter is still rated highly on a number of key dimensions He is praised by a 71-12% majority for the masterful job he has done in welding the Democrats into a unified party in 1976 A 69 9% majority view him as a man of high integrity," somewhat down from the 75-5% rating following the Democratic convention A big 67-12% majority likes him for not being part of the Washington, D C establishment " By 53-27%, a majority feels he has the courage not to make promises to get votes "

However, in two important respects, there have been sharp fall-offs since the Democratic convention Although a 52-33% majority still views Carter as the kind of new, fresh face that is needed in the White House," a more impressive 68-20% felt that way in July

A 52-21% majority holds the view that "as president, Jimmy Carter would inspire confidence personally in the White House " After the Democratic convention, a much larger 62-15% majority felt that way On this key confidence dimension, he has lost 10 points In the 10 biggest states, Carter scores no better than 48-23% on this pivotal element

On six negative attributes, doubts about Carter have risen to significant proportions

—By 48-41%, a plurality nationwide feels that ' it is hard to get up real enthusiasm for Jimmy Carter as a candidate for President In the 10 biggest states, this doubt rises to 51-38% After he was nominated, a 52-39% majority was capable of generating genuine enthusiasm for the Carter candidacy

—By 45-44%, voters nationwide feel that "Carter makes me uneasy because I can't tell what kind of person he really is " After the Democratic convention, a substantial 55-34% majority did not agree with this criticism Thus, there has been a real turnaround on this score In the 10 biggest states, a 47-42% plurality feels personally uneasy about Carter

—By 48-28%, a plurality feels that 'at first, Jimmy Carter sounded like an independent candidate, but in making peace with all the old political bosses, labor leaders and others in the Democratic Party, he doesn t seem so independent anymore "

—By 49-34%, a plurality of the voters also feels that Carter "has ducked taking stands on issues to avoid offending anybody, and that is wrong " A narrower 43-39% felt the same way about him after the Democratic convention In the 10 big crucial states, a higher 51-31% criticize Carter for fudging on the issues

—By 48-29%, a plurality of the voters also believes that Carter looks good at first glance, but he doesn t have enough experience in national and world affairs ' a turnaround from the 40-36% plurality who did not feel that way back in July

—By the thinnest of margins, a 41-40% plurality now denies that Jimmy Carter "strikes me as a tough coldblooded politician, underneath his soft talk A clear cut 52 32% majority denied this only six weeks ago

Although he is currently enjoying an 11-point lead over President Ford nationally, Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter still strikes most voters as an ambivalent and paradoxical public figure. Doubts about him are particularly evident among voters in the largest 10 states of the country, where Carter is ahead by a relatively narrow 44 to 38%, with third-party candidate Eugene McCarthy at 7%.

In the latest Harris Survey, conducted the past three weeks among a substantial 2,844 likely voters nationwide, a consistent pattern can be seen. There has been a noticeable drop in the public's rating of Carter's positive attributes, accompanied by a sharp rise in what they find negative about him. In short, the public euphoria about Jimmy Carter, which reached its peak just after the Democratic convention, has now given way to a close second look and a good deal of skeptical questioning.

To be sure, Carter is still rated highly on a number of key dimensions. He is praised by a 71-12% majority for the masterful job he has done in welding the Democrats into a unified party in 1976. A 69-9% majority view him as a "man of high integrity," somewhat down from the 75-5% rating following the Democratic convention. A big 67-12% majority likes him for not being "part of the Washington, D.C. establishment." By 53-27%, a majority feels "he has the courage not to make promises to get votes."

However, in two important respects, there have been sharp fall-offs since the Democratic convention. Although a 52-33% majority still views Carter as "the kind of new, fresh face that is needed in the White House," a more impressive 68-20% felt that way in July.

A 52-21% majority holds the view that "as president, Jimmy Carter would inspire confidence personally in the White House." After the Democratic convention, a much larger 62-15% majority felt that way. On this key confidence dimension, he has lost 10 points. In the 10 biggest states, Carter scores no better than 48-23% on this pivotal element.

On six negative attributes, doubts about Carter have risen to significant proportions:

—By 48-41%, a plurality nationwide feels that "it is hard to get up real enthusiasm for Jimmy Carter as a candidate for President." In the 10 biggest states, this doubt rises to 51-38%. After he was nominated, a 52-39% majority was capable of generating genuine enthusiasm for the Carter candidacy.

—By 45-44%, voters nationwide feel that "Carter makes me uneasy because I can't tell what kind of person he really is." After the Democratic convention, a substantial 55-34% majority did not agree with this criticism. Thus, there has been a real turnaround on this score. In the 10 biggest states, a 47-42% plurality feels personally uneasy about Carter.

—By 48-28%, a plurality feels that "at first, Jimmy Carter sounded like an independent candidate, but in making peace with all the old political bosses, labor leaders and others in the Democratic Party, he doesn't seem so independent anymore."

—By 49-34%, a plurality of the voters also feels that Carter "has ducked taking stands on issues to avoid offending anybody, and that is wrong." A narrower 43-39% felt the same way about him after the Democratic convention. In the 10 big crucial states, a higher 51-31% criticize Carter for fudging on the issues.

—By 48-29%, a plurality of the voters also believes that Carter "looks good at first glance, but he doesn't have enough experience in national and world affairs," a turnaround from the 40-36% plurality who did not feel that way back in July.

—By the thinnest of margins, a 41-40% plurality now denies that Jimmy Carter "strikes me as a tough coldblooded politician, underneath his soft talk." A clear cut 52-32% majority denied this only six weeks ago.

Carrier, Destroyer Collide; Six Injured

Washington (UPI) — The aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy and the destroyer USS Bordelon collided Tuesday night during a refueling operation north of Scotland, a Navy spokesman said Wednesday.

The spokesman said there were no fatalities but six Bordelon crewmen were injured, two of them seriously.

The two ships were involved in a NATO exercise involving 250 ships, 24 submarines and more than 900 airplanes.

About 6:30 p.m. CDT Tuesday, the Bordelon was alongside the Kennedy to take fuel from the aircraft carrier, a routine but delicate operation under good conditions. The spokesman said the ships collided and parted immediately.

NAPE Wins Run-Off Vote Of Roads Dept. Workers

By The Associated Press

The Nebraska Association of Public Employes has won an election making it the exclusive bargaining agent for non-supervisory workers in the State Department of Roads, NAPE Executive Director Roger Schulz said Wednesday.

The Nebraska Court of Industrial Relations confirmed that NAPE had won a run-off election with the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes to represent department maintenance workers.

In July NAPE won the right to represent construction, clerical and technical workers

In that same July election, maintenance workers did not give AFSCME or NAPE enough votes to claim bargaining agent rights.

The court said ballots counted Wednesday in the run-off election gave NAPE 386 votes, AFSCME 287. Two ballots were challenged and 16 were voided, the court said.

"Unless there is a successful challenge, NAPE would be certified as the bargaining agent," a spokesman for the court said

"This means that NAPE is official representative of maintenance workers in the department," Schulz said. "Excluding supervisory personnel, it means NAPE is now the bargaining agent for the Roads Department workers"

The two bargaining units at the department have a combined total of about 2,100 employes, Schulz said.

"We hope we can get a contract put together and begin negotiating a contract that could go into effect next July 1."

Schulz said he hoped the victory would give NAPE "quite a bit of momentum" towards organizing workers in other state departments.

NAPE is also exclusive bargaining agent for employes in the Game and Parks Commission.

State Leaving 90 Metered Spaces Open To Public

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The public will have access to 90 metered parking stalls in the new five-level ramp immediately east of Lincoln's state office building, state officials indicated Wednesday

The third floor (ground level) might be open by January for public use with four-hour maximum meters. The garage at 15th and M allows persons with state business to park and walk across the traffic-clear Centennial Mall.

Department of Administrative Services Director Stan Matzke and other state officials met with the 44 agency heads to review their move into the building, on the block surrounded by 14th, 15th, L and M

"We are on a tight time frame" to complete the shifts from scattered Lincoln offices, Matzke said, but noted the November-December moves are ahead of schedule. The $20-million structure was originally targeted for January completion.

The second new parking ramp sits to the south, at the corner of 14th and L. Each has stalls for 450 cars. About 10 spaces will be reserved for handicapped parking.

Matzke said DAS is trying to arrange for Sunday use of the ramps by persons attending churches nearby.

The lighted garages will be opened at night for public parking at 50 cents a car, to serve persons attending downtown events Some spaces will be reserved nights for state employes. Planning was done with city-county cooperation, Matzke said.

For the 1,800 to 2,000 daytime building employes, agency heads expressed concern about 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. traffic jams at the two state garages. Only about seven of the agencies indicated they have staggered-hour work shifts.

Of the 900 parking stalls available, 90 will be allotted the state motor pool in the east ramp plus the 90 for the public.

In the east ramp, Matzke said DAS may "oversell between 15% to 20%" the 270 employe stalls with "hunting permits" at $10 a month, because studies show 100% daily use is rare.

All 450 stalls in the south garage will be assigned and have card-operated access, with rental fees at $15 monthly except on the uncovered roof level at $12 each. A tunnel connects the south ramp with the state office building.

Both ramps will pay their own way from fees but make no profit, Matzke said Agency heads will assign parking stalls, rather letting DAS or using a random lottery method tht ignores seniority.

Project head George Miller said the building is 45 days from completion, despite outward first floor appearances. Mechanical systems materials are on site with an Oct. 25 finish date.

The tight schedule dictates the Revenue Department move in on Nov. 1 or delay until after the heavy tax season. Revenue will occupy the second floor. The Education Department will move into the sixth floor about Nov. 11.

Working down, the fifth and fourth floors should be occupied in November, the third floor on Dec. 1 and the first on Dec. 15. Basement offices moves are set last, Dec. 22.

Exon Is Silent On Beatrice Home Charges

Gov J James Exon had no immediate comment Wednesday on the U S Justice Department contention he and the state have failed to adhere to an agreement governing the Beatrice State Home

"We've talked to the (Nebraska) attorney general and we'll be preparing a response," said Exon aide Bill Hoppner. "They're old charges. We think they're unfounded charges, and we'll be responding accordingly"

Federal officials requested a U S District Court hearing in Omaha on issues in dispute, including allegations the mentally retarded served in Beatrice are deprived of their constitutional rights. The agreement and consent decree last year set up a governing board to administer state actions following a lawsuit

The board has been primarily involved in reducing the Beatrice State Home client load and placing clients in community programs.

Life Begins At Forty:

Library Helper Sees No Pattern To Reading Tastes By Age, Sex

By JOANNE FARRIS

A READER WRITES: You asked recently for readers to write in and tell what kinds of books they are reading.

I'm a library volunteer, age is 69, and every other week I go to local nursing and retirement homes with the bookmobile. I've gotten to know a lot of new people that way. I enjoy visiting with them while they are looking over the books we've brought. I also check their books in and out, and take back to the library requests for books to bring out next time.

Not all our patrons are old, of course, but I haven't been able to observe any pattern to reading tastes by either age or sex.

In one retirement home they've started a book club. Each week a member does a talk on a favorite book. I think this would be a good undertaking for any senior residence, and I know from my own experience that libraries are glad to help.

Our library even takes films to show at nursing homes from time to time. We really prefer to have patrons come to the film presentations at the library; that gets them out of the houses, and they have a nice social occasion, too.

I'll be interested to learn if any reading patterns emerge from the replies your readers send in about their reading tastes.

COMMENT: Speaking of book clubs, I just heard of a novel one. They meet only twice a year, and the cost to the dozen members is the price of one book.

At their first meeting they draw up a list of 12 books that all of them pick. One member buys the books and handles the finances. The books are distributed at the second meeting, and the exchange dates for the books to be passed along to the next reader are set. At the end of the year the club gives the books, which all members have read, to a local charity. They've been at it for 12 years now and love it.

A READER WRITES: Our Area Aging Agency just got a good lesson on how to serve their constituents, i.e.: "us." They worked on a plan to help them refer senior citizens to the right places for various kinds of assistance.

They had a meeting of the local social service agencies to exchange information about what services to the elders each agency offered. So far so good.

Then they got busy putting together a booklet to tell senior citizens where to go for services, but the booklet got too long and complicated, what with cross-references, etc.

Furthermore, someone came up with the bright observation that before they got it to the printer the booklet would be out of date. So they took a second look. And that's where they got the lesson.

They decided to get some input from some of us elders ourselves. Once they did that, they began to see that we are the people they are trying to serve, but that they weren't doing a very good job finding out what our needs were in the area of information. Result?

We came up with a short pamphlet based on these rules that we seniors drew up, which said: "Don't put in too much information. Give the basics and we'll come back for more if we need it.

By following these rules, the Area Aging Agency was able to afford to print its booklet, and they got it out fast, and the basic information is not going to change much so they'll be able to use the booklets for quite a while before they are out of date.

I wonder how many agencies forget this cardinal rule: The best way to serve people is to find out from them what they want and need.

COMMENT: Sound advice; thanks for writing.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

Fiji — We left The - Islands - Under - The - Wind a day too early to see the firewalkers of Raiatea. I've been close to firewalkers several times, but somehow I always miss them.

There are the firewalkers of Raiatea. The firewalkers of Bega in the Fijis. (Early dictionary men from the London Missionary Society had a hard time sorting out words and pronunciation. Thus "Bega" is said "Mbengga.")

There are East Indians — imported labor to the Fijis — who brought religious firewalking with them.

☆ ☆ ☆

"It's all a religious thing," a British resident born in Fiji told me. "That is, it isn't secret. It's just that this one village has an in with the fire god.

"They don't mind doing it in public. Fact, they like it. When the P & O boats were coming in, the firewalkers came over from Bega to perform. Charged $500 Australian for the show.

"They bring their own rocks"

These are the days of spring below the equator Warm. Sunny. A flashing sea and quiet turquoise lagoons.

A few fat, white clouds float in a sky as blue as washed jeans. The big rains have not begun. There were a couple of days of rainfall between Mana and Lautoka — "Bligh waters" they call the passage.

Captain Bligh and his 17 who refused to mutiny on the "Bounty" sailed through here.

"Peopwe who've lived here a long time say they've never seen it go so long without big rains," they told me at Huahine across the channel from Raiatea.

The New Zealand newspapers are flown into Nadi airport and are full of news about the dry weather in that country.

In Fiji there's been village talk that shooting rockets to Mars may have offended the rain gods And some people say it is caused by the French blowing up nuclear bombs in the Pacific.

The Britisher said· "Oh, we get some rain, right enough. Like the rain the other couple c days over in Lautoka. But n the big rains the old people tal about

"I mean when it rains 10 inches a day for maybe five days in a row"

Some years ago I sat on the back porch at Aggie Grey's in Samoa and watched rain come down for three days. It was measuring 10 to 12 inches a day The freighters loading copra had run out to sea and safety.

During the incident, Yellow Bird allegedly shot and wounded two other men

Yellow Bird remains in custody in lieu of bond, which was continued at $5,000 on each count

This'll Be An RV Banner Year

Beef Prices May Start Rising

New York (UPI) — Beef prices in the United States now are well below those at this time last year, but the prospect is they will be on the rise by the first of the year The National Restaurant Association says a survey of cattle feeders shows that the high cost of grain and falling demand for beef products has brought about a reduction of animals moving into feedlots for processing But the falling supply and lack of demand are expected to work together to boost prices in the coming months

Rothenberg: Huskers 35, Indiana 7

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

New York (AP) — This is the one-year anniversary of one of the worst picks in college football history: Indiana 14, Nebraska 13.

Coming off an unimpressive 10-7 victory over LSU, the feeling was that powerful Nebraska could be had. Hence, the pick here for one year ago read "This is no misprint and this is no mismatch. Indiana 14, Nebraska 13."

Indiana apparently was as overconfident as at least one columnist. The final score was 45-0, a mispick by a mere 46 points.

The Cornhuskers, exhibiting an ability to laugh at adversity as well as create it for others, sent this column the game ball. The inscription read simply: "From the 1975 Cornhuskers — Nebraska 45, Indiana 0."

It serves as a reminder that you can't win them all.

The same now has to be said for eighth-ranked Nebraska, which played a 6-6 tie with LSU last Saturday. The Cornhuskers won't win them all this year. But they won't lose to Indiana this Saturday. And history won't repeat itself here.

After all, they're not playing basketball, they're playing football . . . Nebraska 35, Indiana 7.

Osborne Would Like IU Repeat

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Coach Tom Osborne would like to see his Nebraska Cornhuskers get off to the kind of start they did last season against Indiana in NU's Memorial Stadium.

Dave Butterfield intercepted an Indiana pass on the first play of the game and the Huskers drove for a touchdown in ten plays. They turned it into a 24-0 rout at the half and led 38-0 after three quarters. Reserves finished up the 45-0 victory.

"If things go well and we get two or three touchdowns in early it might be like it was last year," Osborne said after Nebraska's final workout of the week in pads Wednesday afternoon. "On the other hand, we keep people hanging around and make mistakes at critical times it might be just like the LSU game. "We'll be fighting for our lives right down to the last couple minutes of the game."

Osborne recalled that Indiana played pretty well later in the season a year ago, giving up single touchdowns in each of the last three games (Michigan State, Wisconsin and Purdue) and playing Ohio State even through almost three quarters.

"They played very well against Ohio State," Osborne said. "They were behind 17-14 in the fourth quarter and had the ball with a chance to win the game, but they didn't score.

"So, there's absolutely no assurances we'll have the kind of game we had last year. I don't know how good we are now or how good Indiana is right now. It's apt to be a real tough head-knocker again."

Osborne also said Indiana's 32-13 loss to Minnesota actually seemed like it was anybody's game last week until Minnesota blocked a punt for a touchdown. "Then Minnesota scored on the last play of the game, which made it seem worse than it was.

Indiana generated 284 yards of total offense against the Gophers despite losing its top two tailbacks during the course of the game. The Hoosier defense, however, yielded 358 yards.

Osborne described IU quarterback a "good thrower" and that "on the whole Indiana's offense moved the ball well."

The Husker coach said he's "sick of hearing people say LSU was more fired up or wanted to win more than we did" last week in the 6-6 tie in Bataon Rouge, La.

"I don't believe that at all," he said. "LSU was jumping around our players, hitting them on the back and helmet after plays were over, which the way I read the rule book is a penalty. Our players were told not to retaliate.

"I thought once the ball was snapped we played with every bit as much intensity as they did. I don't buy that no effort or not wanting to win business."

He said LSU should be given credit for playing as well as the Tigers can play, but he said "we can play better."

ABC Football Upsets Viewers

Omaha (AP) — You can please some of the people some of the time, but you can't please all of the television football fans all the time.

Officials of Omaha television station KETV, an ABC affiliate, found that out last weekend, and the switchboard is likely to light up again this Saturday when area residents realize they're going to watch the Colorado-Washington game rather than the battle between Ohio State and Penn State, ranked 2nd and 7th respectively in this week's AP poll.

KETV got "more than 600" telephone calls last week from viewers who wanted to watch the Pittsburgh-Notre Dame game, according to program manager Gary Nielsen. KETV aired the Oklahoma State-Tulsa clash.

Already, calls are beginning to come in about the game slated this week, Nielsen said.

Nielsen said he tried to get the network to let KETV air the game between the Panthers and the Fighting Irish, but his appeal was rejected.

Last week, viewers of some Iowa stations got the Pitt game, while others got the Oklahoma State game.

All ABC affiliates in Nebraska got the Oklahoma State game.

This week, all ABC stations in Iowa will get the Ohio State game, but those in Nebraska will get the Colorado game.

Nielsen offered the possibility of some good news for Nebraska fans. Although it has not yet been announced and nothing has been firmed, Nielsen said there is a chance that Nebraska and Missouri might be picked up from Lincoln on a regional telecast Oct. 23.

At present, the Oct. 23 ABC slate is open, and officials are watching team performances before making a decision on which teams will be picked for video exposure that day, according to Nielsen.

A lot will depend on how Nebraska and Missouri do in the weeks to come.

Boating Boom On Prairies

Boating on the prairie, particularly in Nebraska, is booming — that is if you can get a boat in the water at this late date.

While low water levels this year at the state's two largest reservoirs, Harlan County and Lake McConaughy, are such that boat launching is becoming a real problem, boat registration this year is up.

According to the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers, more boats were registered in Nebraska than at any time in history last year. Some 38,903 motored boats were registered with the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission in 1975.

That's an increase of seven per cent over 1974 when 36,351 boats were registered. The 1976 figures are expected to be higher yet.

Now, the Game and Parks Commission has also noted it will pursue the possibility of requiring registration of all water craft in use in the state — to include canoes, sailboats, rowboats and rafts.

Legislative approval would be needed to make such a change in the registration policy of the state but the Game and Parks authorities, who administer all the state's boating regulations, feel everyone should be required to take a part in financing their recreation.

Currently in Nebraska, only motor boats are required to be registered. Nonpowered boats, such as canoes and sailboats, haven't been required to get boat numbers and file a boat registration with the state.

Many Reasons Given

According to discussion at past meetings of the commissioners, several reasons are given to provide for the all craft registration.

One reason is funding. Sailboats and numerous nonpowered craft currently make use of public boat docks on public waters. These docks are paid for, in part, by boating registrations. The attitude of what's fair for one should be fair for all is given since motorboaters have to pay for the use of these facilities and for law enforcement through their registration fees.

A second reason is safety. Occasionally an empty boat turns up on some of our lakes, rivers and streams. Generally this occurs after a storm or high winds.

Since the boat is abandoned, commission people don't know whether someone was in the boat without knowing the owner. If a boat is registered, the commission can easily check registration sheets for the name of the owner to find out if the boat is just missing or if someone was in it and missing as well.

Here's a case where a life could be saved or searches for missing persons started immediately, according to the commission. Without the registration, there is no way of finding the owner of a boat if it is otherwise unmarked.

The reasoning behind the registration of all boats is sound. Safety and increasing revenues are big issues when it comes to any recreational outlet. Boating isn't any different.

Look for some of these proposals to appear before the state Legislature in its upcoming session.

No, Rennie Stennett of Pittsburgh isn't doing a handstand, although the Pirates feel good after cutting Philadelphia's lead to five games. The second baseman tried to grab Greg Luzinski's fly ball Tuesday night but fell down as teammate Dave Parker made the catch. Pittsburgh won, 7-2.

Pirates Pound Phillies, 7-2

From News Wires

Bill Robinson of the Pittsburgh Pirates has a funny way of saying thanks.

Robinson has said often how grateful he is to the Philadelphia Phillies' organization for rescuing him from the minors in 1972. He just loves the Phillies, even thought they traded him to Pittsburgh last year.

The trouble is that Robinson is just killing the Phillies with his love. He did it again Wednesday night, slamming a two-run homer and an RBI single as the Pirates scuttled the Phillies 7-2 and kept alive their hopes in the National League Eastern Division race.

Left-hander John Candelaria earned his 15th victory in 21 decisions, limiting the Phillies to three hits, striking out four and walking three in seven innings. Kent Tekulve finished up with two innings of scoreless relief.

The Pirates jumped on Philadelphia starter Jim Kaat, 11-13, for a 2-0 lead in the second inning, when Dave Parker hit a one-out single, and Robinson followed with his 20th homer. They made it 4-0 in the third, routing Kaat. Richie Zisk banged his 20th homer, Willie Stargell doubled and Parker ripped a run-scoring single, the second of his four hits.

Candelaria walked Mike Schmidt with one out in the fourth, and after Greg Luzinski flied out, Dick Allen hit a towering drive over the centerfield fence to cut the lead to 4-2.

The Pirates wrapped up their fourth straight victory over the Phillies in the eighth off reliever Tug McGraw, the fourth of five Philadelphia pitchers. Parker doubled and scored on Robinson's single. A sacrifive bunt and pinch hitter Tommy Helms' double sent home the sixth run, and Parker ended the scoring in the ninth with his 11th homer. It came off Gene Garber.

Frank Taveras opened the Pirates' first with a single but was erased when Rennie Stennett hit into a double play. Dave Cash drew a one-out walk in the Philadelphia first and was out stealing as Schmidt struck out.

In Anaheim, pinch hitter Tommy Davis' line single to centerfield with one out in the ninth inning brought Nolan Ryan his 14th victory of the season in a 2-1 decision by the California Angels over the Kansas City Royals.

Prior to Davis' game-winning hit off the first pitch from reliever Mark Litteil, the Angels loaded the bases on a singles by Dave Collins and Dan Briggs sandwiched around Jerry Remy's forceout, plus an intentional walk to Rusty Torres.

Rayn, now 14-17, yielded six hits and struck out nine to run his major league-leading total to 287. He has now won four straight.

The Royals' run came in the sixth. Fred Patek singled and stole his 48th base before coming home on a single by Tom Poquette. The Angels tied it in the seventh on one-out singles by Dan Briggs and Tony Solaita plus Bruce Bochte's sacrifice fly to deep left field.

East Gives Up State Meet

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

Since the inception of the girls state swimming meet, Lincoln East has enjoyed the "home" pool advantage over the rest of the field.

Now, with the completion of the swimming and diving arena in the Nebraska Sports Complex nearing, it appears East will lose that advantage — and coach Dennis Vokolek is anxious to give it up.

Not because East doesn't have a good arena to host the event, but because Vokolek would like to approach the meet as a coach, not an official.

"Invariably, as the host school, I'd get tied up with the meet and not be able to concentrate with the kids," Vokolek says. "Now, I'll be able to coach right up to and through the state meet with no distractions."

To Vokolek, that seems well worth the loss of knowledge of wave-wash, lane marks and targets at the bottom of the pool — the most important factors of swimming in your home pool.

He looks at the Sports Complex as offering an adventure for all kids, even those in Lincoln.

"What that complex is doing for high school and college sports in the state is phenomenal," Vokolek says. "It's giving kids from all over a chance to congregate at the best facility the state has to offer. It's like traveling, but still never leaving the city."

While it could be said that East had the advantage of using its own pool for conference and state meets, Vokolek figures the other Lincoln schools had that same advantage.

"Lincoln kids swim in the pool so much, they're all familiar with it," he says. "Now everybody will walk in the same, in a totally neutral, totally accomodable pool."

The University pool will also offer the possibility of swimming 10 lanes in preliminaries to cut down on the time needed to run a meet of state magnitude.

Vokolek's East squad, and Steve Nootz' Southeast team, third and fourth respectively at the state meet last year, both hope to better those finishes this season.

East returns the defending state 200 yard individual medley champion Kris Funk along with 11 other letterwinners including a strong diving corps.

"With the 42 girls we have out for swimming and diving, East should be as strong if not stronger on the state scene this year," Vokolek says. "The possibility of a challenge to the Omaha teams (Bellevue and Westside) along with Southeast for the state title is within East's reach."

"We expect to improve our fourth place finish in the state last year with the loss of only two seniors and a real good crop of sophomores," Nootz said of Southeast. "We have the talent to go to the top, but the girls are going to have to pay the price of hard work and sacrifice."

Southeast's hopes revolve around the return of 13 letterwinners including fifth place diver Cathy O'Brien.

Lincoln High and Northeast should both be stronger this season returning eight letterwinners apiece.

The Links under coach Gene Cotter already own a relay meet title, winning the Ralston Relays Saturday with strong performances from returners Barb Harris (state champ in the 50 free and 100 butterfly), Joette Larson, Carla McCord, Carol Nun, Lanna Starkweather, Carol Stephens, Joy Stephens and Laura Williams.

Northeast coach Dave Strange is excited about the prospects of having the best team Northeast has ever had.

"I believe this team will break every girls' swimming record the school has," Strange says.

Junior Jean Neal is Strange's best returner with a fourth place finish in the breaststroke at state and seventh in the individual medley.

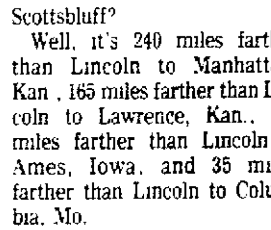
It's Long Ride For Spartans



Prep Picks

How far is Lincoln from Scottsbluff?

Well, it's 240 miles farther than Lincoln to Manhattan, Kan., 165 miles farther than Lincoln to Lawrence, Kan., 130 miles farther than Lincoln to Ames, Iowa, and 35 miles farther than Lincoln to Columbia, Mo.

Friday, Lincoln East will travel more miles to play Scottsbluff than Nebraska travels to play four of its Big Eight Conference opponents.

But it'll be an even longer road to November's playoffs if the twice defending state champion Spartans lose in Nebraska's panhandle. East can't afford the luxury of waiting to bounce back after Grand Island ended the Spartans' 23-game unbeaten streak last weekend.

Scottsbluff, boasting perhaps its best team in nine years, has outscored Alliance and Cheyenne (Wyo.) East, 88-0, in the first two games.

The eighth-rated Bearcats also have easier sledding to a possible playoff berth after the East game, should they stumble against the Spartans.

When Scottsbluff's players heard that Grand Island had upset East, there was universal disappointment.

"Our kids really wanted a shot at that," Scottsbluff coach Les Lee says. "I'm just as eager to play East. But after last week, I'm afraid we're running into someone a little more upset than they would have been."

Scottsbluff relishes the chance to play any Lincoln school. "We're fortunate the Lincoln schools are agreeable to these arrangements, which are going to be expanded in the future," Lee indicates.

"It's pretty hard for us to get recognition out here, even when we have a good ball club," Lee says. "There's no other way to find out other than cross-comparison. The playoffs have helped, but so do these opportunities during the regular season."

Lee concedes this may be one of Scottsbluff's choicest teams in recent years. He compares the potential favorably with the 1967 state championship team, featuring the junior passing combination of Tom Engelman and Frosty Anderson.

"We went 10-0 that year," Lee recalls, "but no one really knew what to think of us until we put it to Fremont pretty good in the Big 10 playoff (26-7) when they came into the game undefeated."

"Both of those clubs are way down this year from what they usually are," Lee points out. "We don't know what to think yet. We are confident we have a real solid defensive unit. We have an awful lot of people back from the last two years and these kids lost only two games last year."

Lee is in his 13th year at Scottsbluff after spending one year coaching in Wyoming, two in Colorado and three at Crete. He has a sparkling 113-51-4 career record.

"We've been fortunate so far with injuries," Lee says. "We've only got one kid out with a shoulder separation. It seems like injuries have hit us pretty hard in the past.

"The potential is there for a real good season," he adds, "but attitude is such a big thing. East is going to be foaming at the mouth to bounce back and win."

In games involving Lincoln teams, it's:

Millard (1-1) v. Lincoln Northeast (0-2), Friday night, Seacrest Field — If the Rockets lose three straight, they should be prepared to walk through quicksand in Monday's practice.

Lincoln East (1-1) at Scottsbluff (2-0), Friday night — If the Spartans lose two straight, things won't be as tough. They might only have to crawl through a mine field next Monday.

Lincoln High (1-0-1) at Hastings (1-1), Friday night — The Links need a strong tuneup before plunging into intra-city combat next week against Northeast.

Lincoln Southeast (1-0-1) at Ralston (2-0), Friday night — The Rams are specializing in explosives this season. The Knights are going to have to be crafty demolition experts.

McCook (0-2) at Lincoln Pius X (2-0), Friday night — No one told rookie Bison coach Dave Dunham scoring was going to be so tough. His team's view of the end zone has been through binoculars in losses to Kearney (6-0) and Holdrege (10-0).

Creighton Prep, the Sunday Journal and Star's No. 1 Class A team, faces a strong challenge Friday night in the Metro Conference headliner at Omaha Benson.

Class B's top-rated Lexington visits Broken Bow and Fremont Bergan, No. 1 in C-1, hosts Omaha Holy Name. Class C-2 pacesetter Nebraska City Lourdes plays at Louisville.

Cambridge, Class D's No. 1 outfit, could be tested at Lexington St. Ann Friday night. Eight-man leader Adams also could get an argument at Dawson-Verdon.

NU Women's Budget Problems A Battle For Swofford

By DAVE SITTLER

Tucked away in a corner of Aleen Swofford's office is a sign that reads "Hang in there, baby."

The message, resting above a coat rack behind Swofford's desk, comes close to telling it like it is for Swofford.

In the midst of her second year as Nebraska's first women's athletic director, Swofford is still hanging in there. Although, she admits, sometimes she feels like she's clinging by the tips of her fingernails.

"It's depressing at times," Swofford says of her job.

The biggest battle Swofford faces is the budget. Like most people these days, she has one thing on her mind — money. Or the lack of it.

Last year, the women's program operated on a [illegible] budget. Swofford requested a boost to $277,000. She got $215,000.

"When I submitted the budget it was a realistic request and not padded," Swofford said.

Of the $215,000, a major share is funded by the men's athletic department. Nebraska Athletic Director Bob Devaney provides $100,000, another $102,000 comes from taxes while the women make up the remaining $13,000.

"We have raised $8,000 of the $13,000," Swofford said. "But some of this is carry over from last year. We have to depend on gate receipts and booster clubs to come up with the remaining $5,000."

Sitting in her office Tuesday, Swofford broke down the distribution of the 1976-77 budget. She explained that $64,000 is used for team travel expenses, $47,000 goes to scholarships, $21,000 to operations and $80,000 for salaries.

When her budget request was sliced by $62,000, Swofford was forced to curtail some of the big plans she had in mind after her first year on the job.

"We wanted to hire a few more assistant coaches and give some more scholarships," she said. "But that had to be forgotten."

Currently, 55 women are on scholarships for tuition and fees. Fifty-four of the tenders are in-state grants amounting to $700 each. The one out-of-state scholarship is worth $1,800.

Of the nine sports fielded by the women Cornhuskers, basketball has the most athletes — 10 — receiving financial aid. Volleyball and the swimming and diving team follow with eight each.

Each coach is paid $3,000 on a part-time basis except George Nicodemus who coaches both basketball and softball. He is the only full-time mentor with a salary of $12,000.

"It's almost unbelievable what some of the coaches do although they are paid only $3,000," Swofford said.

A prime example is track and field coach Carol Frost. Frost also coaches cross country and teaches a methods class in addition to indoor and outdoor track.

"I really wanted to hire an assistant for Carol," Swofford said. "But I had to draw the line somewhere when the budget was cut."

Swofford believes the budget cut was unnecessary. She would like to see student fees and more tax money go to the athletic department.

"It's the only answer to our problems at the moment," she said. "Most schools consider athletics a part of the students' total education so student fees are granted."

"We have no problems with the men," she said. "Our only conflict is over money. A lot of people think we are trying to tear down the men's program and that's not true. I don't want to hurt their program in the least."

But something has to give. Title IX, a Health, Education and Welfare regulation which demands equal opportunity for women, stipulated that women's sports programs must be on an equal basis with men's by July 21, 1978.

Comparing the salaries of women coaches, the number of scholarships and the total amount of aid with the men's situation, equal opportunity has a long way to go in a short time at Nebraska, Swofford said.

"I like it here and I think we can make it," she said. "And it's great to hear the seniors say 'wow I can't believe the changes around here from four years ago.' Those things make it worth staying."

A breakdown of the nine women's sports includes:

Basketball — Coach George Nicodemus, 10 scholarships, $[illegible] granted for travel expenses. Schedule includes trip to California.

Volleyball — Coach Pat Sullivan, eight scholarships, $[illegible] granted for travel expenses. Also will make a trip in November to California.

Swimming and Diving — Coach Rex [illegible], eight scholarships, $[illegible] granted for travel expenses.

Field Hockey — Coach Harriet [illegible], four scholarships, $2,500 granted for travel expenses. Field hockey will be dropped after this season.

Tennis — Coach Sig [illegible]. Four scholarships, $[illegible] granted for travel expenses.

Gymnastics — Coach Judy Schalk. Four scholarships, $3,000 granted for travel expenses.

Golf — Coach Larry Romine. Three scholarships, $2,000 granted for travel expenses.

Softball — Coach George Nicodemus, six scholarships, $2,000 granted for travel expenses.

Rothenberg: Huskers 35, Indiana 7

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

New York (AP) — This is the one-year anniversary of one of the worst picks in college football history: Indiana 14, Nebraska 13.

Coming off an unimpressive 10-7 victory over LSU, the feeling was that powerful Nebraska could be had. Hence, the pick here for one year ago read: "This is no misprint and this is no mismatch. Indiana 14, Nebraska 13."

Indiana apparently was as overconfident as at least one columnist. The final score was 45-0, a mispick by a mere 46 points.

The Cornhuskers, exhibiting an ability to laugh at adversity as well as create it for others, sent this column the game ball. The inscription read simply: "From the 1975 Cornhuskers — Nebraska 45, Indiana 0."

It serves as a reminder that you can't win them all.

The same now has to be said for eighth-ranked Nebraska, which played a 6-6 tie with LSU last Saturday. The Cornhuskers won't win them all this year. But they won't lose to Indiana this Saturday. And history won't repeat itself here.

After all, they're not playing basketball; they're playing football . . . Nebraska 35, Indiana 7.

Osborne Would Like IU Repeat

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Coach Tom Osborne would like to see his Nebraska Cornhuskers get off to the kind of start they did last season against Indiana in NU's Memorial Stadium.

Dave Butterfield intercepted an Indiana pass on the first play of the game and the Huskers drove for a touchdown in ten plays. They turned it into a 24-0 rout at the half and led 38-0 after three quarters. Reserves finished up the 45-0 victory.

"If things go well and we get two or three touchdowns in early it might be like it was last year," Osborne said after Nebraska's final workout of the week in pads Wednesday afternoon. "On the other hand, we keep people hanging around and make mistakes at critical times it might be just like the LSU game. "We'll be fighting for our lives right down to the last couple minutes of the game."

Osborne recalled that Indiana played pretty well later in the season a year ago, giving up single touchdowns in each of the last three games (Michigan State, Wisconsin and Purdue) and playing Ohio State even through almost three quarters.

"They played very well against Ohio State," Osborne said. "They were behind 17-14 in the fourth quarter and had the ball with a chance to win the game, but they didn't score.

"So, there's absolutely no assurances we'll have the kind of game we had last year. I don't know how good we are now or how good Indiana is right now. It's apt to be a real tough head-knocker again."

Osborne also said Indiana's 32-13 loss to Minnesota actually seemed like it was anybody's game last week until Minnesota blocked a punt for a touchdown. "Then Minnesota scored on the last play of the game, which made it seem worse than it was.

Indiana generated 284 yards of total offense against the Gophers despite losing its top two tailbacks during the course of the game. The Hoosier defense, however, yielded 358 yards.

Osborne described IU quarterback a "good thrower" and that "on the whole Indiana's offense moved the ball well."

The Husker coach said he's "sick of hearing people say LSU was more fired up or wanted to win more than we did" last week in the 6-6 tie in Bataon Rouge, La.

"I don't believe that at all," he said. "LSU was jumping around our players, hitting them on the back and helmet after plays were over, which the way I read the rule book is a penalty. Our players were told not to retaliate.

"I thought once the ball was snapped we played with every bit as much intensity as they did. I don't buy that no effort or not wanting to win business."

He said LSU should be given credit for playing as well as the Tigers can play, but he said "we can play better."

ABC Football Upsets Viewers

Omaha (AP) — You can please some of the people some of the time, but you can't please all of the television football fans all the time.

Officials of Omaha television station KETV, an ABC affiliate, found that out last weekend, and the switchboard is likely to light up again this Saturday when area residents realize they're going to watch the Colorado-Washington game rather than the battle between Ohio State and Penn State, ranked 2nd and 7th respectively in this week's AP poll.

KETV got "more than 600" telephone calls last week from viewers who wanted to watch the Pittsburgh-Notre Dame game, according to program manager Gary Nielsen. KETV aired the Oklahoma State-Tulsa clash.

Already, calls are beginning to come in about the game slated this week, Nielsen said.

Nielsen said he tried to get the network to let KETV air the game between the Panthers and the Fighting Irish, but his appeal was rejected.

Last week, viewers of some Iowa stations got the Pitt game, while others got the Oklahoma State game.

All ABC affiliates in Nebraska got the Oklahoma State game.

This week, all ABC stations in Iowa will get the Ohio State game, but those in Nebraska will get the Colorado game.

Nielsen offered the possibility of some good news for Nebraska fans. Although it has not yet been announced and nothing has been firmed, Nielsen said there is a chance that Nebraska and Missouri might be picked up from Lincoln on a regional telecast Oct. 23.

At present, the Oct. 23 ABC slate is open, and officials are watching team performances before making a decision on which teams will be picked for video exposure that day, according to Nielsen.

A lot will depend on how Nebraska and Missouri do in the weeks to come.

Boating Boom On Prairies

Boating on the prairie, particularly in Nebraska, is booming — that is if you can get a boat in the water at this late date.

While low water levels this year at the state's two largest reservoirs, Harlan County and Lake McConaughy, are such that boat launching is becoming a real problem, boat registration this year is up.

According to the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers, more boats were registered in Nebraska than at any time in history last year. Some 38,903 motored boats were registered with the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission in 1975.

That's an increase of seven per cent over 1974 when 36,351 boats were registered. The 1976 figures are expected to be higher yet.

Now, the Game and Parks Commission has also noted it will pursue the possibility of requiring registration of all water craft in use in the state — to include canoes, sailboats, rowboats and rafts.

How far is Lincoln from Scottsbluff?

Well, it's 240 miles farther than Lincoln to Manhattan, Kan.; 165 miles farther than Lincoln to Lawrence, Kan.; 130 miles farther than Lincoln to Ames, Iowa; and 35 miles farther than Lincoln to Columbia, Mo.

Friday, Lincoln East will travel more miles to play Scottsbluff than Nebraska travels to play four of its Big Eight Conference opponents.

But it'll be an even longer road to November's playoffs if the twice defending state champion Spartans lose in Nebraska's panhandle. East can't afford the luxury of waiting to bounce back after Grand Island ended the Spartans' 23-game unbeaten streak last weekend.

Scottsbluff, boasting perhaps its best team in nine years, has outscored Alliance and Cheyenne (Wyo.) East, 88-0, in the first two games.

The eighth-rated Bearcats also have easier sledding to a possible playoff berth after the East game, should they stumble against the Spartans.

When Scottsbluff's players heard that Grand Island had upset East, there was universal disappointment.

"Our kids really wanted a shot at that," Scottsbluff coach Les Lee says. "I'm just as eager to play East. But after last week, I'm afraid we're running into someone a little more upset than they would have been."

Scottsbluff relishes the chance to play any Lincoln school. "We're fortunate the Lincoln schools are agreeable to these arrangements, which are going to be expanded in the future," Lee indicates.

"It's pretty hard for us to get recognition out here, even when we have a good ball club," Lee says. "There's no other way to find out other than cross-comparison. The playoffs have helped, but so do these opportunities during the regular season."

Lee concedes this may be one of Scottsbluff's choicest teams in recent years. He compares the potential favorably with the 1967 state championship team, featuring the junior passing combination of Tom Engelman and Frosty Anderson.

"We went 10-0 that year," Lee recalls, "but no one really knew what to think of us until we put it to Fremont pretty good in the Big 10 playoff (26-7) when they came into the game undefeated."

"Both of those clubs are way down this year from what they usually are," Lee points out. "We don't know what to think yet. We are confident we have a real solid defensive unit. We have an awful lot of people back from the last two years and these kids lost only two games last year."

Lee is in his 13th year at Scottsbluff after spending one year coaching in Wyoming, two in Colorado and three at Crete. He has a sparkling 113-51-4 career record.

"We've been fortunate so far with injuries," Lee says. "We've only got one kid out with a shoulder separation. It seems like injuries have hit us pretty hard in the past.

"The potential is there for a real good season," he adds, "but attitude is such a big thing. East is going to be foaming at the mouth to bounce back and win."

In games involving Lincoln teams, it's:

Millard (1-1) v. Lincoln Northeast (0-2), Friday night, Seacrest Field — If the Rockets lose three straight, they should be prepared to walk through quicksand in Monday's practice.

Lincoln East (1-1) at Scottsbluff (2-0), Friday night — If the Spartans lose two straight, things won't be as tough. They might only have to crawl through a mine field next Monday.

Lincoln High (1-0-1) at Hastings (1-1), Friday night — The Links need a strong tuneup before plunging into intra-city combat next week against Northeast.

Lincoln Southeast (1-0-1) at Ralston (2-0), Friday night — The Rams are specializing in explosives this season. The Knights are going to have to be crafty demolition experts.

McCook (0-2) at Lincoln Pius X (2-0), Friday night — No one told rookie Bison coach Dave Dunham scoring was going to be so tough. His team's view of the end zone has been through binoculars in losses to Kearney (6-0) and Holdrege (10-0).

Creighton Prep, the Sunday Journal and Star's No. 1 Class A team, faces a strong challenge Friday night in the Metro Conference headliner at Omaha Benson.

Class B's top-rated Lexington visits Broken Bow and Fremont Bergan, No. 1 in C-1, hosts Omaha Holy Name. Class C-2 pacesetter Nebraska City Lourdes plays at Louisville.

Cambridge, Class D's No. 1 outfit, could be tested at Lexington St. Ann Friday night. Eight-man leader Adams also could get an argument at Dawson-Verdon.

NU Women's Budget Problems A Battle For Swofford

By DAVE SITTLER

Tucked away in a corner of Aleen Swofford's office is a sign that reads: "Hang in there, baby."

The message, resting above a coat rack behind Swofford's desk, comes close to telling it like it is for Swofford.

In the midst of her second year as Nebraska's first women's athletic director, Swofford is still hanging in there. Although, she admits, sometimes she feels like she's clinging by the tips of her fingernails.

"It's depressing at times," Swofford says of her job.

The biggest battle Swofford faces is the budget. Like most people these days, she has one thing on her mind — money. Or the lack of it.

Last year, the women's program operated on a $132,000 budget. Swofford requested a boost to $277,000. She got $215,000.

"When I submitted the budget it was a realistic request and not padded," Swofford said.

Of the $215,000, a major share is funded by the men's athletic department. Nebraska Athletic Director Bob Devaney provides $100,000, another $102,000 comes from taxes while the women make up the remaining $13,000.

"We have raised $8,000 of the $13,000," Swofford said. "But some of this is carry over from last year. We have to depend on gate receipts and booster clubs to come up with the remaining $5,000."

Sitting in her office Tuesday, Swofford broke down the distribution of the 1976-77 budget. She explained that $64,000 is used for team travel expenses, $47,000 goes to scholarships, $21,000 to operations and $88,000 for salaries.

When her budget request was sliced by $62,000, Swofford was forced to curtail some of the big plans she had in mind after her first year on the job.

"We wanted to hire a few more assistant coaches and give some more scholarships," she said. "But that had to be forgotten."

Currently, 55 women are on scholarships for tuition and fees. Fifty-four of the tenders are in-state grants amounting to $700 each. The one out-of-state scholarship is worth $1,800.

Of the nine sports fielded by the women Cornhuskers, basketball has the most athletes — 10 — receiving financial aid. Volleyball and the swimming and diving team follow with eight each.

Each coach is paid $3,000 on a part-time basis except George Nicodemus who coaches both basketball and softball. He is the only full-time mentor with a salary of $12,000.

"It's almost unbelievable what some of the coaches do although they are paid only $3,000," Swofford said.

A prime example is track and field coach Carol Frost. Frost also coaches cross country and teaches a methods class in addition to indoor and outdoor track.

"I really wanted to hire an assistant for Carol," Swofford said. "But I had to draw the line somewhere when the budget was cut."

Swofford believes the budget cut was unnecessary. She would like to see student fees and more tax money go to the athletic department.

"It's the only answer to our problems at the moment," she said. "Most schools consider athletics a part of the students' total education so student fees are granted."

"We have no problems with the men," she said. "Our only conflict is over money. A lot of people think we are trying to tear down the men's program and that's not true. I don't want to hurt their program in the least."

But something has to give. Title IX, a Health, Education and Welfare regulation which demands equal opportunity for women, stipulated that women's sports programs must be on an equal basis with men's by July 21, 1978.

Comparing the salaries of women coaches, the number of scholarships and the total amount of aid with the men's situation, equal opportunity has a long way to go in a short time at Nebraska, Swofford said.

"I like it here and I think we can make it," she said. "And it's great to hear the seniors say 'wow I can't believe the changes around here from four years ago.' Those things make it worth staying."

A breakdown of the nine women's sports includes:

Basketball — Coach George Nicodemus, 10 scholarships, $5,200 granted for travel expenses. Schedule includes trip to California.

Volleyball — Coach Pat Sullivan, eight scholarships, $5,200 granted for travel expenses. Also will make a trip in November to California.

Swimming and Diving — Coach Ray Huppert, eight scholarships, $3,800 granted for travel expenses.

Field Hockey — Coach Harriet Gould, four scholarships, $3,500 granted for travel expenses. Field hockey will be dropped after this season.

Tennis — Coach Sig Garnett. Four scholarships, $3,000 granted for travel expenses.

Gymnastics — Coach Judy Schaik. Four scholarships. $3,000 granted for travel expenses.

Golf — Coach Larry Romjue. Three scholarships. $3,000 granted for travel expenses.

Softball — Coach George Nicodemus, six scholarships, $3,800 granted for travel expenses.

Track and field — Coach Carol Frost. Seven scholarships, $4,000 granted for travel expenses.

Canada Win In Overtime

MONTREAL (UPI) — Darryl Sittler faked out Czech goaltender Vladimir Dzurilla, then fired into the vacant net at 11 33 of the first overtime session to give Canada a 5-4 victory over Czechoslovakia Wednesday night and earn for the host nation the championship of its own Canada Cup of Hockey tournament

The victory, before a standing room only crowd of 18,040 at the Montreal Forum, enabled Canada to sweep the Czechs in two straight games in the best-of-three final series.

Sittler took a pass from Lanny McDonald at the Czech blueline and faked out Dzurilla

Earlier in the overtime session, Guy Lapointe had an apparent Cup-winning goal disallowed He shot with one second left in the first half of the first overtime, but his shot trickled past Dzurilla after time had expired in the session

Guy Lafleur also had a goal disallowed 8 30 into the overtime

Jeff Kinney
To Fill Void

Morning Briefing

Kinney Claimed By Buffalo

The Buffalo Bills, trying to fill the void in their backfield left by an injury to running back Jim Braxton, claimed Jeff Kinney on waivers from Kansas City.

Kinney, who was put on waivers by the Chiefs Tuesday, was the first round draft choice by KC in 1972 after a standout career at Nebraska. Braxton was declared out for the season after a Tuesday operation to repair a right knee injury he suffered in the team's opening season loss to Miami.

Other Football

Thomas Howard, who almost went to Colorado, but decided to go to Texas Tech instead, was awarded the Associated Press Lineman of the Week award after his outstanding performance at linebacker against CU.

The Green Bay Packers said they gave the Philadelphia Eagles an undisclosed draft choice for wide receiver Don Zimmerman, to replace injured Jessie Green.

NCAA Division I teams averaged 33,091 fans per game last weekend, higher than any weekend in 1975. NCAA officials said 2,117,809 fans attended 64 games. Michigan had the largest crowd last Saturday with a total of 101,347 fans while Tennessee attracted 82,687 fans at enlarged Neyland Stadium, and Louisiana State set a record with 70,746 fans for its 6-6 tie with Nebraska.

Northwestern quarterback Randy Dean, who passed for 231 yards and three touchdowns against Purdue, has been hospitalized with pneumonia. He will miss Saturday's game with North Carolina.

The NCAA asked the Oklahoma Supreme Court to force Oklahoma to reassign two football coaches to non-coaching duties, but the Supreme Court made no immediate ruling. OU won a district court ruling overturning the NCAA limitation of coaches and assistants. James Feller, Oklahoma City attorney for the NCAA, stressed that other schools are abiding by the rule.

The Court took the case under advisement and said it would be several days before a decision is reached. Seven of the nine Supreme Court judges are graduates of the OU Law School.

Iowa State leads the nation in total offense with a 527 yard total in their 58-14 win over Drake. ISU is seventh in rushing.

University of Pittsburgh starting offensive tackle Joe Stone will be out for three-to-four weeks with a broken jaw sustained when he was attacked Saturday night while walking near the campus with his date.

The Arizona State University booster groups and the Fiesta Bowl committee issued statements opposing a proposed jump by the school to the Pacific Eight athletic conference.

Free agent Pete Athas, a defensive back cut by the Minnesota Vikings, was signed by the New Orleans Saints. Coach Hank Stram put defensive back Clarence Chapman on the injured reserve list after he suffered a sprained ankle in last week's game.

John Matuszak, the No. 1 collegiate draft choice of the NFL in 1973 was invited to try out with the Oakland Raiders. Matuszak was cut by the Kansas City Chiefs and Washington Redskins this summer and now is a free agent.

Georgia coach Vince Dooley has demoted six varsity players, including three starters and two freshmen, reportedly for getting in a brawl in a bar. Dooley said none of the six demoted players will start for the ninth-ranked Bulldogs at Clemson Saturday.

The NFL said that 249 first-year players, including 51 starters, were on the rosters of the 28 clubs which began regular-season play last weekend.

Baseball

Owner Charles O. Finley of the Oakland A's made a contract proposal to five players in an attempt to sign them before they become free agents next month. Finley made offers to Don Baylor, Joe Rudi, Bert Campaneris, Rollie Fingers and Gene Tenace.

The American Association Tulsa Oilers will move their baseball team to another city before next season. The Oilers, located in Tulsa since 1933 and affiliated with the St. Louis Cardinals are interested in Davenport, Ia.; Peoria, Ill.; and New Orleans.

The Tucson Toros of the Pacific Coast League announced they had terminated their AAA working agreement with the Oakland A's and would pursue a new affiliation for next season.

St. Louis Cardinals president August A. Busch, Jr., is after free-agent players "who could bring the Cardinals the pennant" and he hopes to have $3 million or $4 million to lure them to the team.

Oakland A's third baseman Sal Bando and his wife have filed a $2 million lawsuit charging the publishers of "Swank" magazine with defamation of character and invasion of privacy. Bando accuses the magazine of publishing a lewd picture of him with an article "Jock Sex" and combined to wrongfully accuse Bando of "promiscuity, immorality and infidelity."

Basketball

Former Iowa State basketball coach Ken Trickey will take his Mount Vernon, Ill., team against Salem, Ill., coached by Jack Sutter in the team's high school opener this season. Sutter was an assistant at ISU under Trickey.

Other Sports

Ben Crenshaw, the golf tour's third leading money winner this year, shot a five-under par 65 for low pro score in the pro-amateur prelude to the $150,000 Kings Island Open golf tournament starting Thursday.

Gordon Scoles, head track and cross country coach at Northern Illinois, was named assistant track coach at Iowa State.

Dorothy Porter of Cinaminson, N.J., shot a four-over-par 75 on the Pine Needles course in Southern Pines, N.C. to take a one-stroke lead in the 54-hole U.S. Senior Women's golf Association championship.

Canada Win In Overtime

MONTREAL (UPI) — Darryl Sittler faked out Czech goaltender Vladimir Dzurilla, then fired into the vacant net at 11:33 of the first overtime session to give Canada a 5-4 victory over Czechoslovakia Wednesday night and earn for the host nation the championship of its own Canada Cup of Hockey tournament.

The victory, before a standing room only crowd of 18,040 at the Montreal Forum, enabled Canada to sweep the Czechs in two straight games in the best-of-three final series.

Sittler took a pass from Lanny McDonald at the Czech blueline and faked out Dzurilla.

Earlier in the overtime session, Guy Lapointe had an apparent Cup-winning goal disallowed. He shot with one second left in the first half of the first overtime, but his shot trickled past Dzurilla after time had expired in the session.

Guy Lafleur also had a goal disallowed 8:30 into the overtime

W-Club Invite Slated Friday

Nebraska Wesleyan's cross country team will host Doane, Hastings UNO, Kearney, Wayne, Midland and maybe Tarkio in the annual W-club Invitational Friday afternoon at Pioneers Park.

NWU Coach Woody Greeno lists Doane and defending champion UNO as the team favorites with Tim Edwards of Doane the individual to beat over the 4-mile course. "Doane ran real well against Kearney Saturday in a dual," said Greeno. "They placed first with Edwards and then finished 3-4-5-6-7. But we'll make 'em hustle."

Greeno is counting on his five lettermen, Bob Quick, Bob Carlson, Jon Eggers, Larry Bell and Scott McKnight to lead the way for NWU Friday in the official season-opener for the Plainsmen. Quick posted a second place time of 19:47 in a September 4th practice meet at Pioneers, while Carlson, Eggers and Bell were among the top 10 individuals in that non-scored meet.

Colorado's White Out For Season

From News Wires

Colorado coach Bill Mallory lost his only experienced offensive lineman for the season Tuesday as doctors recommended surgery for tackle Leon White.

White suffered ligament damage in a Monday night practice. "This is a real blow, because our offensive line right now is the most critical area of our problem," Mallory said.

But Iowa State's good fortune in the opener was shaded a bit Wednesday when defensive tackle Ron McFarland was lost for the season following knee surgery. McFarland was the second major casualty of the season. Fullback Mike Williams was sidelined for the year after knee surgery.

Bruce had ISU work on natural turf in preparation for the clash with Air Force in Colorado, one of only two games ISU will play on grass.

Missouri football Coach Al Onofrio said starting fullback Rich Dansdill is a doubtful starter for Saturday's game against Illinois.

"He still isn't ready at all," Onofrio said of Dansdill, who is hobbling with an injury.

The Tigers spent much of practice working against Illinois formations, paying particular attention to the Illini passing game.

Injuries occupied the minds of Kansas football coaches.

Starting defensive end Les Barnes was shaken up in Wednesday's practice and reserve linebacker Tom Andeliciewicz bruised a thigh. They left the field early, but Coach Bud Moore said he felt both would be able to play Saturday against Kentucky.

Moore announced that running back Wardell Johnson broke a bone in his hand in Saturday's contest with Washington State, but didn't tell anyone because he thought it was only bruised.

Starting tight end Jim Michaels suffered a recurrence of the pulled hamstring he suffered in preseason drills, but will probably play. If he doesn't, Moore moved reserve defensive end Jerry Calovich to add depth to the tight end position.

Oklahoma State worked for an hour and 40 minutes to smooth things out, according to coach Jim Stanley. He said that free safety Gary Irions and offensive guard Craig Simmons were reported ready to start after shaking off minor injuries.

The Cowboys travel to Little Rock, Ark., Saturday to meet the University of Arkansas.

Kansas State Coach Ellis Rainsberger, preparing for a game Saturday at Texas A&M, cast a worried glance at Manhattan's cool, cloudy sky.

"It will be hot and humid down there and we have to be ready for it," he said.

Rowan Has Senior Lead

Hastings (AP) — Larry Rowan of Lincoln birdied the last hole for a 75 and a one-stroke lead in the second round of the Nebraska Senior Golf Championship Wednesday at Lochland Country Club.

Rowan, competing in the 55-to-59 age group, has a two-day total of 148.

Fred Marconnit of Norfolk finished the day in second place moving up on a 73 for a total 148.

Third place was held by Ben Cowdery, who leads the 65-to-69 group with 75-149.

Leading the 50-to-54 group was Buck Duer of Lincoln with 77 and a total 160.

In the 60-to-64 group, Jack Horner, of Southbury, Conn. ended the day with 77 and a total 151.

In the 70-to-74 group, C.K. Buck of Wilber shot 89 for a total 175 while the 80 and over group was led by Carl Bult of Schuyler who shot 108.

Demolition Work Set At Pawnee

The Game and Parks Commission will be doing some demolition work on the northwest edge of Pawnee Lake near Emerald on Monday and Tuesday.

Foundations of some old buildings have become exposed because of low water and are creating a safety hazard for boaters. Therefore, Parks crews will demolish them to remove the hazard.

COLLEGE POWER RATINGS

HOW TO USE THE RATINGS . . .

ILLUSTRATION. Air Force versus Yale

If the Air Force were to meet Yale on a neutral field, Air Force's Power Rating of 19 would hold a 13 point advantage over Yale's 33 rating.

If the game were played AT AIR FORCE, allow Air Force 3 points for playing at home. AIR FORCE would become a 17 point favorite.

If the game were played AT YALE, allow Yale 3 points for playing at home. This would make AIR FORCE an 11 point favorite.

All teams are measured from the TOP RATING of zero.

ALLOW THREE POINTS FOR HOME FIELD ADVANTAGE.

First number in brackets ( ) indicates Final 1975 Rating.

Middle bracket ( ) indicates team's 1975 Won-Lost Record vs. Pointspread.

Remaining figure represents current 1976 College Power Rating.

Colorado's White Out For Season

From News Wires

Colorado coach Bill Mallory lost his only experienced offensive lineman for the season Tuesday as doctors recommended surgery for tackle Leon White.

White suffered ligament damage in a Monday night practice. "This is a real blow, because our offensive line right now is the most critical area of our problem," Mallory said.

But Iowa State's good fortune in the opener was shaded a bit Wednesday when defensive tackle Ron McFarland was lost for the season following knee surgery. McFarland was the second major casualty of the season. Fullback Mike Williams was sidelined for the year after knee surgery.

Bruce had ISU work on natural turf in preparation for the clash with Air Force in Colorado, one of only two games ISU will play on grass.

Missouri football Coach Al Onofrio said starting fullback Rich Dansdill is a doubtful starter for Saturday's game against Illinois.

"He still isn't ready at all," Onofrio said of Dansdill, who is hobbling with an injury.

The Tigers spent much of practice working against Illinois formations, paying particular attention to the Illini passing game.

Injuries occupied the minds of Kansas football coaches.

Starting defensive end Les Barnes was shaken up in Wednesday's practice and reserve linebacker Tom Andeliciewicz bruised a thigh. They left the field early, but Coach Bud Moore said he felt both would be able to play Saturday against Kentucky.

Moore announced that running back Wardell Johnson broke a bone in his hand in Saturday's contest with Washington State, but didn't tell anyone because he thought it was only bruised.

Starting tight end Jim Michaels suffered a recurrence of the pulled hamstring he suffered in preseason drills, but will probably play. If he doesn't, Moore moved reserve defensive end Jerry Calovich to add depth to the tight end position.

Oklahoma State worked for an hour and 40 minutes to smooth things out, according to coach Jim Stanley. He said that free safety Gary Irions and offensive guard Craig Simmons were reported ready to start after shaking off minor injuries.

The Cowboys travel to Little Rock, Ark., Saturday to meet the University of Arkansas.

Kansas State Coach Ellis Rainsberger, preparing for a game Saturday at Texas A&M, cast a worried glance at Manhattan's cool, cloudy sky.

"It will be hot and humid down there and we have to be ready for it," he said.

Rowan Has Senior Lead

Hastings (AP) — Larry Rowan of Lincoln birdied the last hole for a 75 and a one-stroke lead in the second round of the Nebraska Senior Golf Championship Wednesday at Lochland Country Club.

Rowan, competing in the 55-to-59 age group, has a two-day total of 148.

Fred Marconnit of Norfolk finished the day in second place moving up on a 73 for a total 148.

Third place was held by Ben Cowdery, who leads the 65-to-69 group with 75-149.

Leading the 50-to-54 group was Buck Duer of Lincoln with 77 and a total 160.

In the 60-to-64 group, Jack Horner, of Southbury, Conn. ended the day with 77 and a total 151.

In the 70-to-74 group, C.K. Buck of Wilber shot 89 for a total 175 while the 80 and over group was led by Carl Bult of Schuyler who shot 108.

Demolition Work Set At Pawnee

The Game and Parks Commission will be doing some demolition work on the northwest edge of Pawnee Lake near Emerald on Monday and Tuesday.

Foundations of some old buildings have become exposed because of low water and are creating a safety hazard for boaters. Therefore, Parks crews will demolish them to remove the hazard.

Dixon Paces NU Women

Pella, Ia. — Cindy Dixon placed first overall and paced the Nebraska women's cross country team season opener to a split dual opener on the two mile course here Wednesday afternoon.

Central Iowa edged Nebraska 23-36, but the NU team defeated William Penn College of Orange City, Ia., 17-41.

Dixon, who ran in last year's AIAW national meet, ran the course in 12:37, while another national runner Doris Hitz of NU placed fourth overall with a 13:00 time. Other Nebraska finishers in the 20-individual meet, included freshman Cindy Vickens, eighth 13:20; Pam Baker 13th 14:44; Susie McConkey 15th 15:02 and Sarah Boslaugh 17th, 15:29.

Nebraska field hockey coach Harriet Gould set the team's final roster for the season opener this weekend in the Canadian American Tournament at South Dakota State.

Gould, in her first year at NU, has concentrated workouts on conditioning and stick work since opening practices Sept. 1. "It's hard to tell at this point how good we are," said Gould." "Since we haven't been able to have any exhibition matches."

Volleyball and golf are two other teams that will be starting off their new season of competition this week.

The volleyball team will host Drake University and the University of Nebraska-Omaha, September 18th at the NU Coliseum for their first competitive encounter. Games will start at 10:30 a.m. The golf team has a dual meet scheduled with Creighton University on September 16th. The dual competition will be held at the Applewood Golf Course in Omaha.

COLLEGE POWER RATINGS

HOW TO USE THE RATINGS . . .

ILLUSTRATION: Air Force versus Yale

If the Air Force were to meet Yale on a neutral field, Air Force's Power Rating of 19 would hold a 14-point advantage over Yale's 33 rating.

If the game were played AT AIR FORCE, allow Air Force 3 points for playing at home. AIR FORCE would become a 17-point favorite.

If the game were played AT YALE, allow Yale 3 points for playing at home. This would make AIR FORCE an 11-point favorite.

All teams are measured from the TOP RATING of zero.
ALLOW THREE POINTS FOR HOME FIELD ADVANTAGE.
First number in brackets ( ) indicates Final 1975 Rating.
Middle bracket ( ) indicates team's 1975 Won-Lost Record vs. Pointspread.
Remaining figure represents current 1976 College Power Rating.

Takeover Of Alcoholism Programs Worries Fox

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

"I am concerned with the location of intake and referral and the process we're running these people through to get help," Ralph Fox of Houses of Hope said Wednesday.

"The alkie is waiting in a cage" beside welfare and health clinic clients. "This is dehumanizing," he said. "Every little obstacle we add will deter people from seeking help" for alcohol-related problems.

Fox and other alcoholism professionals expressed concern Wednesday afternoon about arrangements made since the City-County Health Department's recent take-over of four city-funded alcoholism programs.

Intake and referral, one of four services recently placed under the Health Department's wing, has been moved from its former home on the second floor of the old federal building to the second floor of the health and welfare headquarters at 2200 St. Mary's Ave.

Merger of the four alcoholism programs — Intake and referral, the Detoxification Center and the alcloholism counseling programs of the Indian Center and the Lincoln Action Program — was recommended after nine months of study at the city's request.

The Comprehensive Alcoholism Planning Committee (CAPC) recommended that the combined outreach and referral services be located near the Detoxification Center with outreach workers assigned to satellite locations.

The intern quarters adjacent to the Detox Center are often been mentioned as a possible site for the alcoholism counseling program. However, it has been said the cost of remodeling and leasing the building from Lincoln General Hospital would be prohibitive.

CAPC members instructed Ray Solee, acting director of the Health Department's new alcoholism division, to obtain in writing information about the cost and availability of the building.

The Health Department "would pick up and move" detox and intake and referral if the facilities and funds were available, Solee said. "We may need a larger facility for detox if we served all those who need it."

Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs is "not thinking in terms of asking anyone to move detox," said Bob Adams, LCAD director. He said expansion which "is a long way" down the road could be accomplished in the current facility. The city is still in the first year of its five-year lease for the building. The basement is being used for the administration of Antabuse.

Dona Giles, Detox Center administrator, said that the center, which has been open four months, has been averaging about 94 contacts per month.

In other action, CAPC reviewed and recommended approval of a $6,675 House of Hope grant request from the Division on Alcoholism for materials and equipment to bring the halfway house in compliance with fire safety standards.

CAPC members also reviewed a list of needed alcoholism services. They are: development of a program to care for the chronic, late-stage alcoholic; expansion of men's and women's residential rehabilitation programs; a chemical dependency counselor at the Lancaster Mental Health Center; establishment of a funding mechanism to provide local treatment for alcoholics unable to pay; clarification of the use of vocational rehabilitation funds for alcoholics; continued study of the unique needs of women, youth, elderly and minorities; assurance of continuous care for alcoholics.

The committee deferred setting priorities.

Ron Namuth suggested priority of existing services also be determined. No action was taken on the recommendation.

Luedtke Wants Attorneys' Duties Defined

By DEB GRAY
Star Staff Writer

State Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln, chairman of the Legislature's Judiciary Committee, said Wednesday he would support action to clarify the duties of the Nebraska State Patrol special prosecutors.

That statute, LB60-439, stations at least three attorneys within the State Patrol to "assist county attorneys in the preparation and prosecution of cases involving drug abuse."

County attorneys throughout the state have called in the State Patrol attorneys to prosecute drug cases.

"There is an ethical question involved," Luedtke said. "An attorney can not be both the attorney and the investigator in a case. It was the intent of the Judiciary Committee that the lawyers would only assist and advise in these cases."

State Patrol Supt. Col. C.P. Karthauser said he was "mystified" by Luedtke's comments and that no member of the Judiciary Committee had told him he was not carrying out the original intent of the law.

"I have never been told that these attorneys have gone beyond the bounds of the law," Karthauser said. "As I see it, I was following the statutes — period."

Karthauser said the patrol had only responded to a job assigned by the Unicameral.

"When the Nebraska State Patrol is given a responsibility for something, we make every effort to carry out that responsibility," he said.

Luedtke said he was not accusing the State Patrol of breaking the law, only that the language of the original statute needs to be changed to end differing interpretations.

Luedtke also said a recommendation by Karthauser at last week's judiciary subcommittee hearing would create a "two-headed monster."

The recommendation would place the special prosecutors under the jurisdiction of the attorney general instead of the State Patrol.

"You can't have two bosses controlling somebody," Luedtke said. "I think the patrol would be the unhappiest of all with that practice."

Luedtke also defended the patrol's use of ex-felons as drug agents.

"If they are able to help their community and law enforcement after they serve their time, they should be given a chance to do it," he said.

Luedtke's suggestions followed hearings on a report by Lincoln attorneys Kirk Naylor Jr. and Dennis Keefe that pointed out instances of alleged mismanagement of the State Patrol's drug enforcement program.

Highland To Seek Sewer Bids

Engineers for the Highland Development Corp. will let bids for initial sanitary sewer construction in the project, the newly elected board of trustees decided Wednesday.

An engineer's estimate for the project is $95,000 and contracts are to be let about Sept. 21.

Meeting in Lincoln, the corporation also approved the relocation of the Highland golf course, a part of the project, in accordance with a plan approved by the City Council.

Kansan's Identity Under Police Scrutiny

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Asst. Police Chief Roger LaPage said Wednesday that a Kansas man being questioned in the deaths of two boys last year may be the David Dye police have been trying to find for almost a year.

No charges have been filed against the man, however.

"There is not sufficient evidence to charge anyone at this time," LaPage said.

The man, who is 54, may be the transient police have been searching for since 1975 after Jacob Surber, 12, and Jon Simpson, 13, were found stabbed to death. A man who may have used the name David Dye was seen around the State Fairgrounds prior to the disappearances of the boys on Aug. 30 last year.

LaPage said the man being questioned says he is not Dye.

The man has agreed to remain in Lincoln to assist police and sheriff's deputies in the case. He has given authorities information which they are now attempting to verify.

The man has acknowledged he was at the fair last year and may have been near the drainage ditch south of the fairgrounds where Surber's body was discovered Sept. 8, 1975.

The body of his good friend Simpson wasn't discovered until Sept. 22 in a railroad hopper car which had been parked near the fairgrounds until it was moved.

Although their bodies were found almost two weeks and several miles apart, police believe they were killed about the same time by the same person.

Since their grisly murders, police have questioned numerous people and investigated seven "likely suspects." One man police haven't talked to is the transient who may have used the name David Dye.

Dye was seen around the fairgrounds last year and disappeared the same day the boys did, police have said. His disappearance has been termed "timely" by LaPage. The man may be a key witness or suspect in the case.

The man now being questioned was found in Topeka, Kan., by police and deputies after authorities received information that the same man was seen in Lincoln last year during the fair. He has been questioned since Sunday.

Police have said the Kansas man resembles a composite drawing of the transient known as Dye. A psychological profile of Dye indicates he may be a former mental patient who has more than a high school degree. He prbably is a drifter and has never held a job for a long period of time

Police said the Kansas man has traveled around the country working occasionally at fair events.

Further information about the man's possible involvement in the case may be available by Friday, police said.

Finalists Chosen By NU Searchers

By BRYANT BROOKS
Star Staff Writer

From five to seven names have been selected by a 16-member search committee as possible replacements for University of Nebraska President D.B. Varner.

But Committee Chairman Paul Schorr refused to release the names or their exact number, saying the only publicly announced name would be that of Varner's successor when the Board of Regents make their final decision.

"In this way we give the regents an opportunity to review the candidates in great depth and it gives them some freedom with which to work," Schorr said Wednesday night.

The names are to be turned over to Regents President James Moylan within a week — after the committee has compiled background reports on the individuals.

Schorr said he doubted that any of the candidates know they are being considered.

"We will not notify any of them," he said, adding that such action would be up to the regents

The UNL student newspaper, The Daily Nebraskan, reported Wednesday that three men rumored to be in the running are Robert M. White, head of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, James C Olson, interim president of the University of Missouri, and Howard Neville, president of the University of Maine at Orono.

The Daily Nebraskan reported that it contacted Olson, who replied in a prepared statement, "This news is a surprise to me . . . I am just getting into my job as interim president of the University of Missouri and really am not available for anything else."

Neville and White were also reported to be unaware that they were being considered.

Olson is an NU graduate and a former NU vice chancellor for graduate studies and research. Neville is a former NU vice president.

"They named some names which I will not confirm," Schorr said of the paper's report. But then he refused to confirm any of them.

"They are of the highest quality imaginable," was the only way he described them.

The committee has sifted through more than 100 names since it began searching Aug. 2.

Varner announced June 2 that he would resign Jan. 1 to become chairman and chief executive officer of the NU Foundation.

Parking To Cost Double?

Mayor Helen Boosalis said at a news conference Wednesday she will ask the City Council to double the $1 parking fine and to double hourly parking rates.

Parking meters would be converted from a nickel per hour fee to a dime and new meters installed on city streets would be set for a dime-an-hour parking.

Under city ordinance, Mrs. Boosalis has the authority to hike the parking meter charges, but city lawmakers must approve any increases in parking fines.

Mrs. Boosalis also said she will recommend that the penalty for paying fines after five working days be increased from $2 to $5.

Revenue collected from parking fines goes to school districts, although under state law cities may keep a portion to pay expenses.

Lincoln keeps 95 cents of each $1 fine collected to help finance Municipal Court costs. The school district gets the remaining nickel. Lincoln collects about $180,000 each year in parking fees.

In a related matter. Mrs. Boosalis said that by November the city will install 98 new parking meters on the southern half of the Centrum block in downtown Lincoln.

Mob Gathers For 'Loot'

The mob was of one mind. It consisted mainly of college students who all wanted one thing: loot.

But it was an orderly mob, this gathering of record fiends crowding the sidewalk in front of Dirt Cheap, at 227 N. 11th, Wednesday evening.

Dirt Cheap was trying to live up to its name by offering record alumbs at one-half price and giving away a free album with each purchase.

The sale lasted five hours, from 7 p.m. to midnight.

Police were on hand stopping jaywalkers and doubleparkers, but reported no disturbance.

Store manager Terry Moore said he was keeping the door locked and letting customers in 50 at a time.

By midnight, Moore estimated 3,000 customers had been in the store.

Californian Hurt In 3-Car Crash

A California woman was injured Wednesday afternoon in a three-car accident at 56th and Huntington, police reported.

Listed in fair condition at St. Elizabeth Health Center with three broken ribs was Bonita Kuser, 54, of Pasadena, Calif. She was a passenger in a car driven by Juanita V. Mueller, 43, of 5401 Gladstone.

The accident occurred when Ms Mueller's car struck a car driven by Donald B. Thompson, 62, of 5630 Huntington

The force of the collision caused Thompson's car to slide into the front of a third car driven by Walter Gloe, 80, of 5801 Francis.

Gloe was examined at Bryan Hospital because of chest pains, and released.

Franklin St. Residents Protest State Federal Zoning Request

People living along Franlin St. protested a proposed zoning change Wednesday which they say would wreck the quiet, residential setting of their neighborhood

Homeowners told members of the City-County Planning Commission a request by State Federal Savings and Loan Association for business zoning at 40th and Franklin would set a precedent for continued commercial development

State Federal is requesting a change of zone on about one acre of land shaped like an "L" along 40th St. and along Franklin. State Federal wants the zoning changed from A-2 Single Family to G Local Business.

Planning Director Doug Brogden is recommending approval of the business zoning along 40th St , but denial of the zoning along Franklin. A decision by the commission is expected next week

The commission also is slated to decided whether developer Glen Herbert, for Herbert Brothers, can build some houses in the Stevens Creek watershed northeast of 84th and A St

Herbert wants a change of zone to allow construction of 37 single family lots on an 18-acre tract Most of the homes would lie west of the Stevens Creek ridgeline, running near 84th St.

In other business the planners held hearings on:

Changes of Zone

—Application of S E Copple, from AA Rural to A 2 Single Family near N W 56th and W Adams

—Application of Paul Gustafson, from B Two Family to I Commercial, near 47th and Lowell

—Application of Mahlon Sorensen, from A 2 Single Family to D Multiple, at N W 8th and Saunders

—Application of George Brockley from A-2 Single to B Two Family at 57th and Locust

—Application for county zoning change by George Bess, from AA Rural to C Commercial, near S 82nd, between Martell and Hickman Rd

Special Permits

—Application of Michale Campbell to permit construction of greenhouse for nursery at 56th and Pine Lake Rd

—Application of Raymond Snoke, to convert multiple structure to religious dwelling, at 28th and Q St

No Spare Land On Ag Campus For College

There is no sizable surplus of University of Nebraska-Lincoln East Campus land that could be used by Southeast Community College, says UNL chancellor Ray Young, but the two schools can continue to cooperate on program development and avoid duplication SCC hopes to use 115 acres for a central Lincoln campus to replace current leased facilities.

Some observers have suggested SCC might save public money and have a better location if it used UNL or state-owned land.

However, planned UNL agriculture uses leave little desirable spare land, Young said

The ag campus proper includes about 240 acres

Two Men Killed In Crash At Rosalie

Rosalie (AP) — Two men were killed and two other persons injured in the collision of a semi-trailer and a pickup truck about four miles east of Rosalie Wednesday evening, Thurston County authorities said.

Sheriff Clyde Storie identified the dead as Rudolph Miller, 39, of Walthill and Charles Phillips, 34, of Macy, both occupants of the pickup.

The third person in the pickup, Winona Hollowell, 24, also of Macy was listed in critical condition in St. Joseph Hospital in Sioux City, Iowa.

The driver of the semi-trailer, John Marrinar, 33, of Sioux City was slightly injured in the collision, Storie said.

Storie said the accident occurred at the intersection of Nebraska 16 and U.S. Highway 77 about 7:25 p.m.

The sheriff said the semi-trailer was south bound on U.S. 77 and the pickup was eastbound on the county road.

Kansan's Identity Under Police Scrutiny

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Asst. Police Chief Roger LaPage said Wednesday that a Kansas man being questioned in the deaths of two boys last year may be the David Dye police have been trying to find for almost a year.

No charges have been filed against the man, however.

"There is not sufficient evidence to charge anyone at this time," LaPage said.

The man, who is 54, may be the transient police have been searching for since 1975 after Jacob Surber, 12, and Jon Simpson, 13, were found stabbed to death. A man who may have used the name David Dye was seen around the State Fairgrounds prior to the disappearances of the boys on Aug. 30 last year.

LaPage said the man being questioned says he is not Dye.

The man has agreed to remain in Lincoln to assist police and sheriff's deputies in the case. He has given authorities information which they are now attempting to verify.

The man has acknowledged he was at the fair last year and may have been near the drainage ditch south of the fairgrounds where Surber's body was discovered Sept. 8, 1975.

The body of his good friend Simpson wasn't discovered until Sept. 22 in a railroad hopper car which had been parked near the fairgrounds until it was moved.

Although their bodies were found almost two weeks and several miles apart, police believe they were killed about the same time by the same person.

Since their grisly murders, police have questioned numerous people and investigated seven "likely suspects." One man police haven't talked to is the transient who may have used the name David Dye.

Dye was seen around the fairgrounds last year and disappeared the same day the boys did, police have said. His disappearance has been termed "timely" by LaPage. The man may be a key witness or suspect in the case.

The man now being questioned was found in Topeka, Kan., by police and deputies after authorities received information that the same man was seen in Lincoln last year during the fair. He has been questioned since Sunday.

Police have said the Kansas man resembles a composite drawing of the transient known as Dye. A psychological profile of Dye indicates he may be a former mental patient who has more than a high school degree. He prbably is a drifter and has never held a job for a long period of time.

Police said the Kansas man has traveled around the country working occasionally at fair events.

Further information about the man's possible involvement in the case may be available by Friday, police said.

Finalists Chosen By NU Searchers

By BRYANT BROOKS
Star Staff Writer

From five to seven names have been selected by a 16-member search committee as possible replacements for University of Nebraska President D.B. Varner.

But Committee Chairman Paul Schorr refused to release the names or their exact number, saying the only publicly announced name would be that of Varner's successor when the Board of Regents make their final decision.

"In this way we give the regents an opportunity to review the candidates in great depth and it gives them some freedom with which to work," Schorr said Wednesday night.

The names are to be turned over to Regents President James Moylan within a week — after the committee has compiled background reports on the individuals.

Schorr said he doubted that any of the candidates know they are being considered.

"We will not notify any of them," he said, adding that such action would be up to the regents.

The UNL student newspaper, The Daily Nebraskan, reported Wednesday that three men rumored to be in the running are Robert M. White, head of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, James C. Olson, interim president of the University of Missouri, and Howard Neville, president of the University of Maine at Orono.

The Daily Nebraskan reported that it contacted Olson, who replied in a prepared statement, "This news is a surprise to me . . . I am just getting into my job as interim president of the University of Missouri and really am not available for anything else."

Neville and White were also reported to be unaware that they were being considered.

Olson is an NU graduate and a former NU vice chancellor for graduate studies and research. Neville is a former NU vice president.

"They named some names which I will not confirm," Schorr said of the paper's report. But then he refused to confirm any of them.

October Hearings Slated On Rural Transportation

The Nebraska Roads Department Wednesday announced a series of hearings next month to give outstate Nebraskans a chance to express their feelings on rural transportation.

Dalyce Ronnau, assistant planning engineer, said hearings are scheduled Oct 4 in St. Paul and Ord, and Oct. 5 in Loop City and Broken Bow.

Rural public transportation projects will be discussed at the hearings by state roads officials and members of the Nebraska Community Action Program, based in Loop City, Ronnau said.

Seven Nebraska counties will be involved in proposed demonstration projects, which are coordinated by the Federal Highway Administration The administration is trying to head up various forms of transportation systems in rural areas to determine which are most effective, he said

If the hearings are successful and rural residents indicate a need for a transportation, Ronnau said, an application will be filed with the Public Service Commission to provide rural transportation.

October Hearings Slated On Rural Transportation

The Nebraska Roads Department Wednesday announced a series of hearings next month to give outstate Nebraskans a chance to express their feelings on rural transportation.

Dalyce Ronnau, assistant planning engineer, said hearings are scheduled Oct. 4 in St. Paul and Ord, and Oct. 5 in Loop City and Broken Bow.

Rural public transportation projects will be discussed at the hearings by state roads officials and members of the Nebraska Community Action Program, based in Loop City, Ronnau said.

Seven Nebraska counties will be involved in proposed demonstration projects, which are coordinated by the Federal Highway Administration. The administration is trying to head up various forms of transportation systems in rural areas to determine which are most effective, he said.

If the hearings are successful and rural residents indicate a need for a transportation, Ronnau said, an application will be filed with the Public Service Commission to provide rural transportation.

Market Posts Small Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market finished a choppy, erratic session with a small gain Wednesday, halting a two-day decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, off 9.74 Monday and Tuesday, recovered .67 to 979.31.

Advances slightly outweighed declines in the over-all count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume stepped up to 17.57 million shares from 15.55 million on Tuesday.

The Dow was down 3 at the outset, up 1 at noontime and off 1 again at mid-afternoon before turning upward once more toward the close.

Analysts said the stop-and-go pattern reflected uncertainty among investors over the prospective length of the nationwide strike against Ford Motor Co., and its possible impact on the economic recovery.

They said the market drew some support from technical forces, such as covering of previous short sales, after the declines of earlier in the week.

In Washington, Alan Greenspan, President Ford's chief economic adviser, repeated his belief that the slowdown in the economy's recovery of late was only a temporary pause, and that it was showing signs of gathering momentum again.

The auto stocks were mixed, with Ford losing a fraction.

Steels were mostly lower in the wake of several layoff announcements in the industry this week.

Anaconda rose more than a point. The company set a special meeting of shareholders for Oct. 20 to vote on a planned merger with Atlantic Richfield. Arco stock rose a fraction.

LTV, the diversified parent company of Jones & Laughlin Steel, gave up more than a point.

—Staying Ahead—

Graft, Corruption Rampant Among Founding Fathers

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — In this, our bicentennial year, let us raise our wallets to the founders of white-collar crime. The fathers of bribery. The leaders who made our nation safe for hustle and graft.

John Hancock. Benjamin Franklin. George Washington. Legions of governors, congressmen and cabinet officers. Quaker merchants of Philadelphia who fenced whatever pirate merchandise they could bid away from the Yankee traders and Virginia gentlemen.

"The true history of the American Revolution cannot be written," John Jay once said. "A great many people in those days were not all what they seemed, nor what they are generally believed to have been." But you'll find at least part of the record in Nathan Miller's new book, "The Founding Finaglers," published by David McKay Co.

Take Robert Morris, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and the key merchant engaged in procuring supplies for the Continental Army. Nearly 100 years later, the market manipulator, "Jubilee Jim" Fisk, spoke the motto for Morris and all other war contractors: "You can sell anything to the government at almost any price you've got the guts to ask."

Morris directed the bulk of the Army's lucrative business to his own firm, wrote himself risk-free contracts, and shipped his goods in government vessels. He once withheld a shipment of gunpowder from the market until prices improved, commenting, "There has never been so fair an opportunity of making a large fortune since I have been conversant in the world."

But Morris was a patriot, which means he withheld goods only when the Army's need was not great. Others "forestalled" (as it was called) food, shoes, clothing and guns from the market even when the Army was hungry and without defense.

Speculators once cornered the market in iron, so that none could be procured for casting artillery and cannon balls except at a prohibitive price. During that famous bitter winter in Valley Forge, prosperous Pennsylvania farmers sold their food to the British for gold rather than to the Americans for debased paper money.

Pennsylvanians weren't the only ones to deal with the enemy. A British officer in New York wrote that, "almost open trade is carried on from here with the rebels. Passionately anxious for gold and silver, they bring us cattle and other provisions . . ."

Earlier, in the French and Indian wars, Yankee traders provisioned the French for battles against the British and American armies. In the Civil War, Gen. Benjamin Butler, the Union commander at New Orleans, made millions by smuggling supplies to the rebels — sometimes using Union steamboats guarded by Union troops.

It could even be said that "smugglers' rights" was the spark that lit the Revolution. Wealthy merchants like John Hancock, whose fortunes depended on running goods through customs without paying taxes, bankrolled the radical Sam Adams in the hope that taxes would be stopped permanently.

George Washington despised the businessman who stole from his armies, but he wasn't above a bit of sharp dealing himself. Before the war he amassed a fortune in land in the Ohio Valley by grabbing rich areas that should have been divided equitably among a group of soldiers. A hostile contemporary biographer called Washington "avaricious under the specious appearance of disinterestedness."

Benjamin Franklin got his hands dirty in a land scheme where, in return for a piece of the action, he used his official position as American delegate to England (supposedly protesting the high taxes) to lobby the court for a grant of 20 million acres. It was to have been the 14th colony but, to Franlin's great chagrin, the project floundered on the approach of war.

Danile Webster, while defending New England mercantile interests in the Senate, wrote to a supporter, "You must contrive some way for me to get rich . . ." In the South, almost every member of the Georgia legislature was bought off during the great Yazoo land scandals. When Benjamin Harrison came into the presidency, he complained that he couldn't name his own cabinet — "They had sold every place to pay the election expenses."

In the Gilded Age, Colin P. Huntington — who preserved the ambition of the Central Pacific Railroad with as much as $500,000 in bribes for each session of Congress — divided the Senate into three groups: the "clean," who would run his errands without pay; the "commercial," who demanded cash; and those who resisted him, whom he called "Communists."

It has been said that every great fortune is founded on a great crime, a maxim that Miller's book documents down through the Harding administration. To expect the best from a combination of politics and wealth is, in the words of Samuel Johnson, a triumph of hope over experience.

Oil Exploration Pace Increases

Houston (UPI) — The pace of world oil exploration continues to increase, especially in Africa, a manufacturer of oil field equipment reports.

As of June 30, the Hughes Tool Co. counted 1,000 rotary drilling rigs, 50 more than in March, operating in non-communist nations outside North America.

The company said the greatest surge occurred in Africa, where 45 more rigs, for a total of 146, started work during the quarter. Eighteen-hundred exploration drillings occurred in the United States in 1975.

Fat Lambs Tender

College Station, Tex. (UPI) — Fat lambs are more tender than those marketed with little or no fat, a Texas Agricultural Extension Service research project shows.

The agency selected 40 lambs with varying degrees of fatness for the study, which showed lamb carcasses with liberal quantities of fat are more tender than those which have limited fat.

The increased fat insulates muscle during postmortem chilling, decreasing the rate of temperature decline and thereby increasing the ultimate tenderness of the cooked meat, the study showed.

Market Posts Small Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market finished a choppy, erratic session with a small gain Wednesday, halting a two-day decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, off 9.74 Monday and Tuesday, recovered .67 to 979.31.

Advances slightly outweighed declines in the over-all count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume stepped up to 17.57 million shares from 15.55 million on Tuesday.

The Dow was down 3 at the outset, up 1 at noontime and off 1 again at mid-afternoon before turning upward once more toward the close.

Analysts said the stop-and-go pattern reflected uncertainty among investors over the prospective length of the nationwide strike against Ford Motor Co., and its possible impact on the economic recovery.

They said the market drew some support from technical forces, such as covering of previous short sales, after the declines of earlier in the week.

In Washington, Alan Greenspan, President Ford's chief economic adviser, repeated his belief that the slowdown in the economy's recovery of late was only a temporary pause, and that it was showing signs of gathering momentum again.

The auto stocks were mixed, with Ford losing a fraction.

Steels were mostly lower in the wake of several layoff announcements in the industry this week.

Anaconda rose more than a point. The company set a special meeting of shareholders for Oct. 20 to vote on a planned merger with Atlantic Richfield. Arco stock rose a fraction.

LTV, the diversified parent company of Jones & Laughlin Steel, gave up more than a point.

Graft, Corruption Rampant Among Founding Fathers

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — In this, our bicentennial year, let us raise our wallets to the founders of white-collar crime. The fathers of bribery. The leaders who made our nation safe for hustle and graft.

John Hancock. Benjamin Franklin. George Washington. Legions of governors, congressmen and cabinet officers. Quaker merchants of Philadelphia who fenced whatever pirate merchandise they could bid away from the Yankee traders and Virginia gentlemen.

"The true history of the American Revolution cannot be written," John Jay once said. "A great many people in those days were not all what they seemed, nor what they are generally believed to have been." But you'll find at least part of the record in Nathan Miller's new book, "The Founding Finaglers," published by David McKay Co.

Take Robert Morris, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and the key merchant engaged in procuring supplies for the Continental Army. Nearly 100 years later, the market manipulator, "Jubilee Jim" Fisk, spoke the motto for Morris and all other war contractors: "You can sell anything to the government at almost any price you've got the guts to ask."

Morris directed the bulk of the Army's lucrative business to his own firm, wrote himself risk-free contracts, and shipped his goods in government vessels. He once withheld a shipment of gunpowder from the market until prices improved, commenting, "There has never been so fair an opportunity of making a large fortune since I have been conversant in the world."

But Morris was a patriot, which means he withheld goods only when the Army's need was not great. Others "forestalled" (as it was called) food, shoes, clothing and guns from the market even when the Army was hungry and without defense.

Speculators once cornered the market in iron, so that none could be procured for casting artillery and cannon balls except at a prohibitive price. During that famous bitter winter in Valley Forge, prosperous Pennsylvania farmers sold their food to the British for gold rather than to the Americans for debased paper money.

Pennsylvanians weren't the only ones to deal with the enemy. A British officer in New York wrote that, "almost open trade is carried on from here with the rebels. Passionately anxious for gold and silver, they bring us cattle and other provisions . . ."

Earlier, in the French and Indian wars, Yankee traders provisioned the French for battles against the British and American armies. In the Civil War, Gen. Benjamin Butler, the Union commander at New Orleans, made millions by smuggling supplies to the rebels — sometimes using Union steamboats guarded by Union troops.

It could even be said that "smugglers' rights" was the spark that lit the Revolution. Wealthy merchants like John Hancock, whose fortunes depended on running goods through customs without paying taxes, bankrolled the radical Sam Adams in the hope that taxes would be stopped permanently.

George Washington despised the businessman who stole from his armies, but he wasn't above a bit of sharp dealing himself. Before the war he amassed a fortune in land in the Ohio Valley by grabbing rich areas that should have been divided equitably among a group of soldiers. A hostile contemporary biographer called Washington "avaricious under the specious appearance of disinterestedness."

Benjamin Franklin got his hands dirty in a land scheme where, in return for a piece of the action, he used his official position as American delegate to England (supposedly protesting the high taxes) to lobby the court for a grant of 20 million acres. It was to have been the 14th colony but, to Franlin's great chagrin, the project floundered on the approach of war.

Danile Webster, while defending New England mercantile interests in the Senate, wrote to a supporter, "You must contrive some way for me to get rich . . ." In the South, almost every member of the Georgia legislature was bought off during the great Yazoo land scandals. When Benjamin Harrison came into the presidency, he complained that he couldn't name his own cabinet — "They had sold every place to pay the election expenses."

In the Gilded Age, Colin P. Huntington — who preserved the ambition of the Central Pacific Railroad with as much as $500,000 in bribes for each session of Congress — divided the Senate into three groups: the "clean," who would run his errands without pay; the "commercial," who demanded cash; and those who resisted him, whom he called "Communists."

It has been said that every great fortune is founded on a great crime, a maxim that Miller's book documents down through the Harding administration. To expect the best from a combination of politics and wealth is, in the words of Samuel Johnson, a triumph of hope over experience.

Fat Lambs Tender

College Station, Tex. (UPI) — Fat lambs are more tender than those marketed with little or no fat, a Texas Agricultural Extension Service research project shows.

The agency selected 40 lambs with varying degrees of fatness for the study, which showed lamb carcasses with liberal quantities of fat are more tender than those which have limited fat.

The increased fat insulates muscle during postmortem chilling, decreasing the rate of temperature decline and thereby increasing the ultimate tenderness of the cooked meat, the study showed.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

THURSDAY, SEPT. 16, 1976

Cancer is loyal, patriotic, may leave home but can be counted on to return. The native is fond of antiques, traditions, family heritage, is able to collect, invest, consolidate. This applies perhaps more so to those with the Moon in Cancer than it does to Sun signs. But whether it be Sun, Moon or Ascendant, the Cancer individual has a sharply-honed sense of security.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on short trips, relatives, ideas, ability to replace the flimsy with more solid material. Aquarius, Taurus and Scorpio persons could figure prominently. Call or message requires close scrutiny. Don't take on more than you can handle. Family member will provide favorable news.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emphasis on investigation that results in profit. You find what is of value, what can be discarded. Gemini, Virgo individuals play featured roles. Member of opposite sex figures prominently. Excitement discovery and money are highlighted.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lunar cycle is high — you get what you need. A "big deal" could be consumated. Personality, personal appearance, original concepts are featured. You get chance to obtain genuine bargain — a luxury item or jewelry. Family member makes genuine gesture of reconcilation. Be receptive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can "air out" some secret fears, doubts. You "get message" from one who is confined to home, hospital. Key is to be perceptive, to understand truth when you encounter it. Pisces individual figures prominently. You may be asked to represent special cause, club, group, organization.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A wish could be fulfilled. You know what to do and how to organize. You are compensated for efforts, for handling added responsibility. Capricorn, Cancer individuals figure prominently. One who has much to do with confirming policy will support your position.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Study Leo message for valid hint. Finish what you start. Be aware that you will overcome apparent limitations. Emphasis on general standing, prestige, achievement, gaining of wider recognition, acceptance. Be confident!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on study, educational project, ability to take long-range view and to communicate. Publishing, advertising and writing figure in picture. Your personal magnetism rating soars — more persons are interested now in what you say and do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Concern with the hidden or occult is emphasized. Your ESP or intuitive intellect is far-ranging — you perceive what is to occur. Key now is to balance logic and emotion, to understand undercurrent of what is happening, especially in connection with partner, mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lie low. Let others make known their intentions. You gain by listening, observing, laying groundwork for future action. Spotlight is on commitment, long-term relationship, legal tie, marital status. Gemini is very much in picture. Another Sagittarian cannot be ignored, either.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be practical. Protect your own interests. Become familiar with basic material, "homework." Build on solid structure. Keep diet, health resolutions. Get together with work associates, those who share your aims, interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good lunar aspect coincides now with love, emotion, creativity. Accent on change, variety, travel, intensified relationship. Children could be very much in picture, too. Gemini, Virgo figure prominently. You'll be active, fascinated — and others will find you "interesting."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Ability to sift fact from faction is highlighted. You can deal in illusion . . . but you generally know it and realize difference between what is, what could be and what will be. Your "psychic" capabilities come to forefront. Family member says, "I'm sorry." Be receptive and diplomatic.

IF SEPTEMBER 16th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are introspective, analytical, creative, sensitive and not easy to live with . . . you are prescient, temperamental, somewhat of a perfectionist and subject to moods which others find difficult to understand. Pisces people play key roles in your life — other Virgo persons also figure prominently. You're on a merry-go-round now — but you'll come down to earth in October. You have much to accomplish and you're making necessary contacts.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
